A family rift in the White House?

Report Carter's son, Chip, wife are separating

Spokesmen deny President asks Chip to leave the W.H.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Amid reports of a marital separation, the President's 27-year-old son, Chip Carter, is moving to Plains while his wife, Caron, and their baby remain in the White House.

But White House press spokesmen denied reports Saturday that the President had angrily asked Chip to leave the White House after Chip informed him that he was separating from Caron.

Caron's father, Ben Griffin, confirmed that Caron and Chip were having marital problems but was quoted in Atlanta as saying: "I don't think it's reached a point that it's a hopeless situation."

Griffin said: "I don't know all the particulars, but young people — all young couples — have their moments when things aren't going right with them."

As for reports the President threw Chip out of the White House, Griffin said he doubted Carter would take such "punitive" action.

"That's not what a daddy does," he said.

Meanwhile, Mary Finch Hoyt, the first lady's press secretary, declined Saturday to confirm or deny that Chip and Caron were considering a separation.

"This is a private matter," Mrs. Hoyt said. "I'm trying to respect the couple's wish that this is a private matter."

Mrs. Hoyt read this statement:

"Chip is going to Plains. Caron and the baby will remain in the White House for awhile. It is expected that Caron and (baby) James will join Chip later."

Asked who expected them to get back together, Mrs. Hoyt said, "The family, I guess."

Mrs. Hoyt said Chip, who recently resigned an $8,000-a-year part-time job with the Democratic National Committee, will leave for Plains within the next few days, after winding up business in Washington.

He will work in the family's peanut business, the spokeswoman said.

Caron and the baby will go to Camp David for a vacation with the Carters, Mrs. Hoyt said.

The couple was married in 1973. Their only child, James Earl Carter IV, was born last Feb. 25.

Caron Carter said through a White House switchboard operator that she was not taking calls from the press. Chip Carter could not be reached for comment.

Mrs. Hoyt said she does not know if the couple is seeing a marriage counselor, and when asked if legal papers had been filed, she replied, "I don't think so."

Chip and Caron, 26, moved into the White House in January when Carter became president. So did Jeff Carter, the President's third son, who is 24, and his wife.

Asked if the couple is still living together in the White House, Mrs. Hoyt first said, "I have no comment on that." But later she added, "I don't know if he (Chip) is living at the White House. He was at the house (Friday) night when I left."

Berkowitz' dad breaks down in appeal to victims' families

MINEOLA, N.Y. (AP) — The tearful father of accused .44 caliber killer David Berkowitz said Saturday he grieves for the victims of the Son of Sam and asked for understanding from their families.

"I keep thinking it's only a bad dream and that I will wake up," 68-year-old Nathan Berkowitz said as he met with reporters for the first time since his adopted son's capture Wednesday night.

"I deeply grieve with all my heart," he said. "We, too, are victims of this tragedy. I will live with this heartache for the rest of my life."

He said he had not seen his son in almost a year, and did not know what he would say when he did see him, except that "it will be spontaneous."

David Berkowitz is charged in the murder and wounding of Son of Sam's last two victims. The gunman, who used the same .44 caliber gun in all his attacks, killed six young persons and wounded seven in little more than a year.

A grand jury was presented evidence in Berkowitz' case Friday and was to be given more evidence Monday. Berkowitz, meanwhile, was being given a psychiatric examination to determine if he is competent to stand trial.

Addressing the victims' families, the elder Berkowitz declared: "If David did these things, I don't expect you to forgive him, as this would be too much to ask of you.

"The only thing I do ask of you is to understand the pain and the agony that is within ... knowing the pain and agony of you parents," he said. He read a statement handwritten on a piece of green paper at an emotional news conference near the offices of the lawyer he retained to defend his son.

"My loss is not because of one son that I adopted, but my loss is multiplied by what each and every one of the parents of these crimes feel in his or her heart."

In a husky and increasingly broken voice, Berkowitz continued: "I ask of you not to burden us with your feelings towards David."

Berkowitz, who flew here from Boynton Beach, Fla., when his son, David, 24, was arrested, spoke at a courthouse here against the advice of friends, according to one of his lawyers, Ira Jultak. He said Berkowitz was "under extreme stress" and taking medication.

"Until a few days ago, I was leading a normal life in retirement," the former Bronx hardware store owner said. "Then my life completely turned around."

Dressed in light blue pants and a yellow windbreaker, and wearing sunglasses to shield his swollen eyes, Berkowitz answered only a few questions after his statement.

The session ended when a reporter asked Berkowitz's immediate reaction upon hearing of his son's arrest.

"I cried," he said. At that point he broke down crying, and was led away by Jultak.

Leon Stern, an attorney hired by Nathan Berkowitz, refused to elaborate on the question of who will represent David Berkowitz. Stern said he did not know who hired Phillip Peltz, a Brooklyn attorney. Peltz said he was retained by a Berkowitz family member, whom he refuses to name.

The New York Post said Saturday that Peltz and an associate had offered to sell the newspaper serialization and book rights to interviews with the suspect for $100,000 plus a percentage of the proceeds from book sales. The Daily News reported a similar offer but Peltz denied it. He would not comment when asked if an associate had made such an offer.

Stern called the defense of David Berkowitz "the most unpopular cause, I believe, in the annals of criminal jurisprudence in our generation and possibly in the history of criminal jurisprudence."

Pacific Tel, 2 of 3 unions in accord

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A walkout by some 1,200 registered nurses at Kaiser Permanente Medical Center is expected to continue for at least another five days, a spokeswoman for the nurses said Saturday.

Contract negotiations have been postponed until Wednesday. At issue is a wage disagreement, with nurses asking for an 8.5 per cent pay hike and the hospital offering 6.5 per cent.

The striking nurses are members of the United Nurses Association of California. They walked off their jobs early Thursday.

Hospital officials say all patients will receive adequate care during the strike, although some elective surgery has been postponed. There are currently about 700 patients in the 17 hospitals affected by the strike, according to Kaiser officials.

Negotiators for the Bell System and the Communications Workers of America reached agreement with local unions in many of the nation's cities Saturday night. But picket lines were set up in New York State as bargaining continued past the midnight deadline.

"The clock is stopped. They are still negotiating," said a spokesman for the New York Telephone Co. However, Greg Tubby, secretary of Local 1101 of the CWA, said 32,000 members of the CWA went on strike in spite of the continuation of the talks.

In Washington, D.C., Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. and District 2 of the Communications Workers of America reached tentative agreement on a local contract.

Agreement came just over an hour before a threatened midnight strike by 31,000 workers in Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia and the District of Columbia.

Bell, which averted a nationwide strike by the 100,000-member CWA a week ago, continued to negotiate with local unions in many cities past the midnight strike deadline.

Tentative agreements were reached several hours before the strike deadline in Denver, St. Louis, Columbus, Milwaukee and Birmingham, Ala.

Pesticide banned as cause of sterility

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — California has suspended use of a chemical pesticide ingredient that authorities say may have caused sterility among some male workers in a San Joaquin Valley plant.

By this action, all use, handling, manufacture and sale of the chemical will be banned at all agricultural and industrial sites in the state.

Don Vial, state industrial relations director, banned the chemical — 1,2-dibromo-3-chloropropane — in all work sites because of its health hazard. The ban took effect at midnight Friday.

In a statement, Vial cited animal studies just made public which he said show the chemical is not only cancer-causing but produces "rapidly spreading cancer lesions."

About 800,000 pounds of the compound were used in the state last year, Vial said.

Richard Rominger, state food and agriculture director, issued the suspension notice for agricultural use and registration of the chemical, which is used to combat bugs.

Rominger said that suspension will remain in effect until the department holds an investigation into the matter and decides whether to make the suspension temporary or permanent.

First Lady entering hospital for surgery

WASHINGTON (AP) — First Lady Rosalynn Carter will enter Bethesda Naval Hospital today for surgery described as a "routine gynecological procedure," the White House announced Saturday.

It was understood that Mrs. Carter would have a dilation and curettage operation, a medical procedure that has been in routine use for many years for treating various minor irregularities in the female reproductive tract.

Mrs. Carter will be operated on Monday morning and is expected to remain in the hospital until Monday afternoon, said her press secretary, Mary Finch Hoyt.

Mrs. Hoyt said the First Lady plans no changes in her schedule and is keeping her plan to visit Canada later this month.

Mrs. Carter will be 50 years old Aug. 18.

The operation will be performed by Dr. Douglas Knab, chief of the obstetrics and gynecological division.

It has become known in recent years as one of the common methods used in performing legal abortions and treating victims of rape.

Man struck by train at Pomona crossing, killed

A 28-year-old Pomona man was killed instantly Saturday morning after being struck by a train at a Pomona railroad crossing.

The victim was identified by the Los Angeles County Coroner's office as David Lloyd Rudd, 1263 W. Holt Ave.

According to Pomona police, Rudd was walking near Hamilton Avenue and First Street about 9:20 a.m. when he tried to cross the railroad tracks at that location and was struck by an oncoming train.

Witnesses told police crossing gates at the scene were down and cars were waiting at the gates when Rudd tried to dart across. The train was traveling approximately 50 miles-per-hour, police reported.

Rudd's body was discovered later in a severed and badly damaged condition.

Chino police to go to court in pay dispute

By BOB SWETNAM
PB Staff Writer

Chino police officers will go to court Monday in an effort to stop the Chino City Council from adopting a salary ordinance officers object to, a police association spokesman has revealed.

Attorneys for the Chino Police Association, which represents most police department employes in the city, plan to seek a temporary restraining order and an injunction against the City of Chino. Police claim city officials have "intimidated, restrained and coerced" the association during contract talks this year.

Attorneys accuse city officials of failing to meet with association negotiators in good faith and claim the city has not provided enough time to adequately resolve differences.

The Chino Police Association declared an impasse in negotiations recently after they were unable to reach agreement with the city on terms of a new contract.

A letter mailed to the city attorney's office from William J. Brunick, attorney for the policeman's association, lists three reasons why legal action is being planned.

"The City of Chino has interfered with, intimidated, restrained and coerced the Chino Police Association from exercising fully its rights pursuant to California Government code Sections 3502 and 3506," states the letter.

Brunick claims a request for third-party resolution of the long-standing wage dispute has been rejected by city officials.

"Based upon my information, the City Council intends to mandate settlement upon the police association," says Brunick. "Such action would be in violation of Government Code 3500-3509 since the police association is still willing to meet and confer with the City of Chino in an effort to resolve this matter."

Chino police employes are not the only group unable to reach agreement with city officials. Earlier this month the City Council unanimously approved pay raises for City Hall and service department groups despite the fact agreement could not be reached during contract negotiations.

A spokesman for employes at that time said workers were "very unhappy" with the council's action.

City officials could not be reached for comment on the legal threat by the police association.

Secretary of State Cyrus Vance returns to Andrews Air Force Base, Maryland, Saturday ending a 13-day effort to bring peace to the Middle East and Rhodesia. He will report on his trip to President Jimmy Carter today.

Vance returns from peace mission

LONDON (AP) — Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance flew home to Washington on Saturday at the end of a 13-day effort to bring peace to the Middle East and Rhodesia.

The secretary spent 11 days on a whirlwind, six-nation tour of key Middle East nations seeking an elusive peace that has been the target of many of his predecessors.

During his flight home, Vance disclosed that he and British Foreign Secretary David Owen had completed a detailed plan for bringing majority black rule to Rhodesia next year through a "one-man, one-vote" formula.

But the plan's future was considered in doubt because South African support for it, considered essential, was not forthcoming.

On his arrival in Washington, Vance declined to characterize his peace mission as a success or a failure. "I think it was a very useful trip," he said.

A White House official said "there certainly were some elements of progress" on the Middle East situation in Vance's trip but added: "Some very strong elements of continued separation remain."

The official said Vance will report personally to President Carter today and spell out some of the elements of progress publicly. "Others we'll have to talk about in general terms," the official said.

Vance arrived in London Thursday night and spent Friday and Saturday conferring with British and African leaders on Anglo-American efforts to end a guerrilla war and transfer power from Rhodesia's 273,000 whites to its 6.2 million blacks.

Final proposals were adopted at a luncheon attended by Vance, Owens and British Prime Minister James Callaghan at Chequers, Callaghan's country estate outside London.

Vance, in a news conference aboard his jet on the way home, provided a few sketchy details. He said a constitution and annexes have been prepared and that there would be a development fund to ease the transition from white minority to black majority rule.

"We believe the plan is fair and reasonable," Vance said. "We believe it could commend itself to international opinion."

Previous efforts to take control of Rhodesia away from Prime Minister Ian D. Smith have failed. Smith has sought measures protecting the 270,000 white "settlers," while militant black leaders opposed the limited concessions offered to the minority whites in the past.

Vance said Owen and Andrew Young, the U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, will visit Southern Africa around the end of this month to try to gain support for the proposals. The plan will be outlined publicly at that time, he said.

Forest fires continue to burn in West

By The Associated Press

The West's dry timberland continued to burn Saturday with overnight lightning in Oregon adding to the problem by igniting 30 new forest fires.

The biggest new blazes were in southern Oregon, where the Des Chutes, Umpgua and Fremont national forests were burning. The Fremont fire covered 300 acres, the Des Chutes fire about 70 and the Umpgua fire about 10.

Meanwhile, on California's central coast, the blaze called Marble-Cone was reported 50 per cent contained after spreading over more than 117,000 acres of wilderness just east of Big Sur. But authorities said it was unlikely the fire would be brought under control in less than a week as strong winds continued to fan the fire through woodland virtually untouched in the past year by precipitation.

The fire has already been burning for two weeks, during which it has reduced a quarter of the Los Padres National Forest to a smoldering patch of black. More than 5,400 fire fighters are involved in trying to bring it to a halt.

The fire continued to burn out of control Saturday, and fire fighters said there was no way to contain it until a 20-mile swath was hacked around its northern front. "And a great portion of that line will have to be cut by hand because it's too steep to get bulldozers in," said Dick Marlo, a U.S. Forest Service information officer.

"It's kind of like fighting a war," Marlo said. "You're never sure where the enemy will go next."

In addition, the 86,000-acre Scarface blaze in Northern California, which was contained Thursday, continued to smolder.

And four fires that began Friday continue to burn out of control in the Klamath National Forest in northwestern California. Another eight were reported after the lightning and strong winds of Friday night.

A spokeswoman for the National Fire Information Service in Boise, Idaho, said about 1,000 new fire fighters were working in California and southern Oregon. A total of 10,000 are now involved fighting fires in those two states, and Nevada, Colorado and Alaska.

There was better news from Alaska, where rain over most of the state eased fire problems. But the 200,000-acre Bear Creek Fire continued to burn in the south-central portion of the state although winds shifted near the village of Nikolai, and fire fighters said it was out of immediate danger.

Saxbe: gentleman farmer with a restless spirit

EDITOR'S NOTE — William B. Saxbe can reflect on national and international affairs from his position as former U.S. senator, U.S. attorney general and ambassador to India. Seven months out of public office, he hasn't lost his barbed views.

MECHANICSBURG, Ohio (AP) — For the first time in 30 years of public life, William Bart Saxbe is a rebel without a cause.

He's too young to be an elder statesman, though he has the experience, and at 61, public office is no longer exciting. "I'd enjoy being a candidate, but I wouldn't enjoy serving."

He affects pleasure as a gentleman farmer and private lawyer. But the casual dress and unscheduled pace seems to clash with opinions of a restless spirit in the lawyer who went from the Ohio Legislature to the U.S. Senate, became Richard Nixon's attorney general and Gerald Ford's ambassador to India.

Witness:

"I hope that Congress follows up with a joint committee to supervise all of our intellience agencies ... I proposed that to Congress."

Or:

"India has so many problems that it's not going to change very rapidly ... Democracy does not have a very happy prospect in India."

Or:

"I think Mr. Young has kind of got his signals mixed ... He shouldn't be in a position of a guy who is supposed to be gaining supporters for the United States."

And on David Frost's interviews with former President Nixon:

"For Nixon it was a moneymaker, and he needs the money. As far as enlightening the public ... it was a washout ... It wasn't even very good entertainment."

Saxbe drew his last government paycheck in January, 30 years to the month after he first took a seat in the Ohio House of Representatives.

"I've made it through the first six months, and that's the toughest test," he says as though comparing it with a smoking withdrawal program.

His political career? "I've enjoyed it thoroughly.I think it's time to get younger people in.

Sporting a golfer's tan, Bill Saxbe is comfortable and relaxed — at least outwardly — in his native village where he still practices law, just a half-hour's drive from his old legislative seat in Columbus.

But he remains interested in public affairs. He opposes prosecuting FBI agents for questionable wire taps or other covert actions.

He was aware while attorney general, he says, that some agents abused their authority. He also says that some wiretaps were authorized by presidents, but "I put a stop to this type of operation.

"We authorized no wire taps on domestics, with the exception of known enemy agents. I began the exposure when I went to Congress and said, 'Here's what happened. What do you want to do about it?'"

He found that Congress wanted to do nothing.

The FBI, he says, "had their own lobbying operation in Congress. They were very effective. They had people on the appropriations committee who said to the Justice Department, 'Lay off the FBI ... We'll take care of that.'"

Now, he says, the FBI "is under a much shorter tether ... They no longer feel that they can go to Congress and go over ... the Justice Department."

Relaxing in his office chair, his right jaw bulging with a wad of tobacco, Saxbe says he is content to practice law and be close to family and friends. Few know his wife by her given name of Ardath. As Dolly, she has a reputation in Ohio, Washington and New Delhi as a charming hostess, seldom in the forefront of public affairs but always at Bill's side.

Saxbe practices law in Mechanicsburg with his younger son, state Rep. Charles "Rocky" Saxbe, 31. The elder Saxbe is closing his law office in Washington, and he and Rocky are becoming partners in a new Columbus law firm, Chester, Saxbe, Hoffman and Wilcox.

His older son, Bill Jr., 36, and daughter-in-law, Georgia Newman, are physicians in Mechanicsburg. Daughter Juli James, 33, is wife of a Daniel, Wyo., rancher.

Saxbe doesn't deny his occasional blunt manner of speech, but he says that being ambassador to India inhibited his "that's the way it is" approach.

"Diplomacy is a different type of business, and you are dealing with the sensitivities of the country you serve. You certainly don't go around making enemies of people whose job it is to make friends."

That led to U.N. Ambassador Andrew Young:

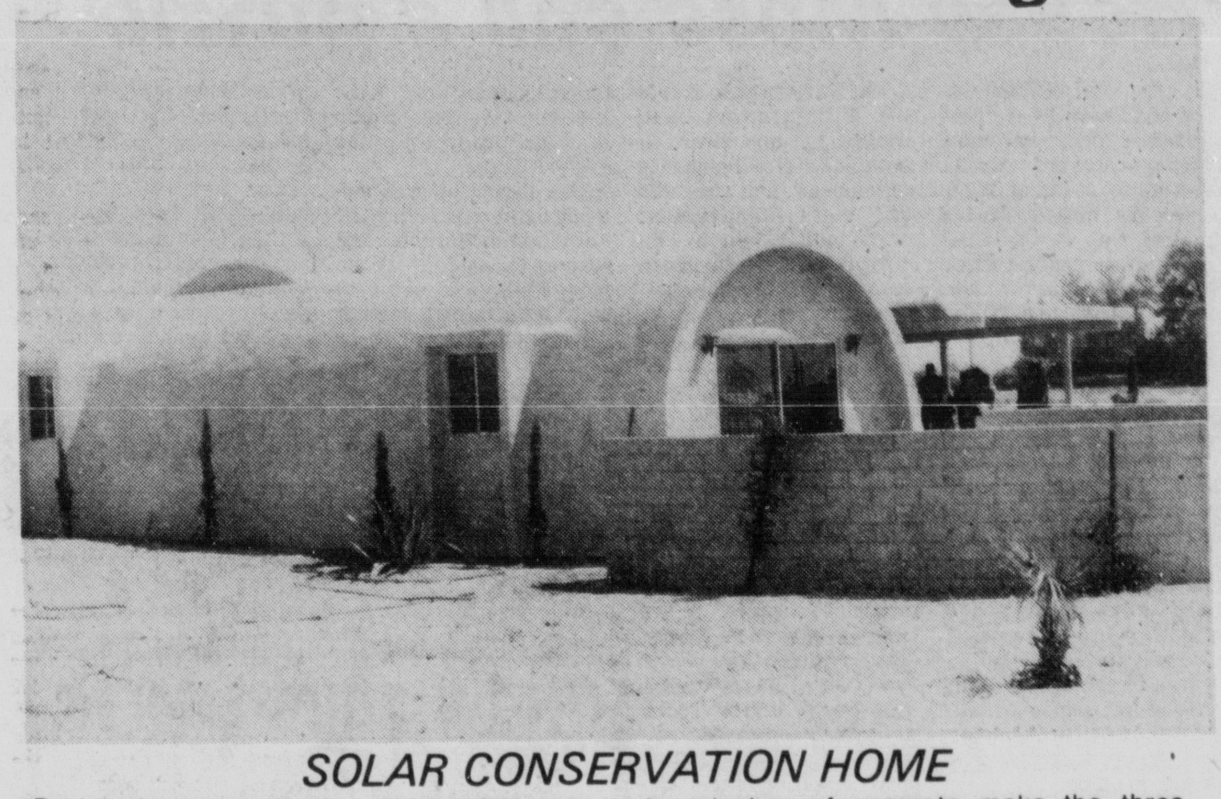
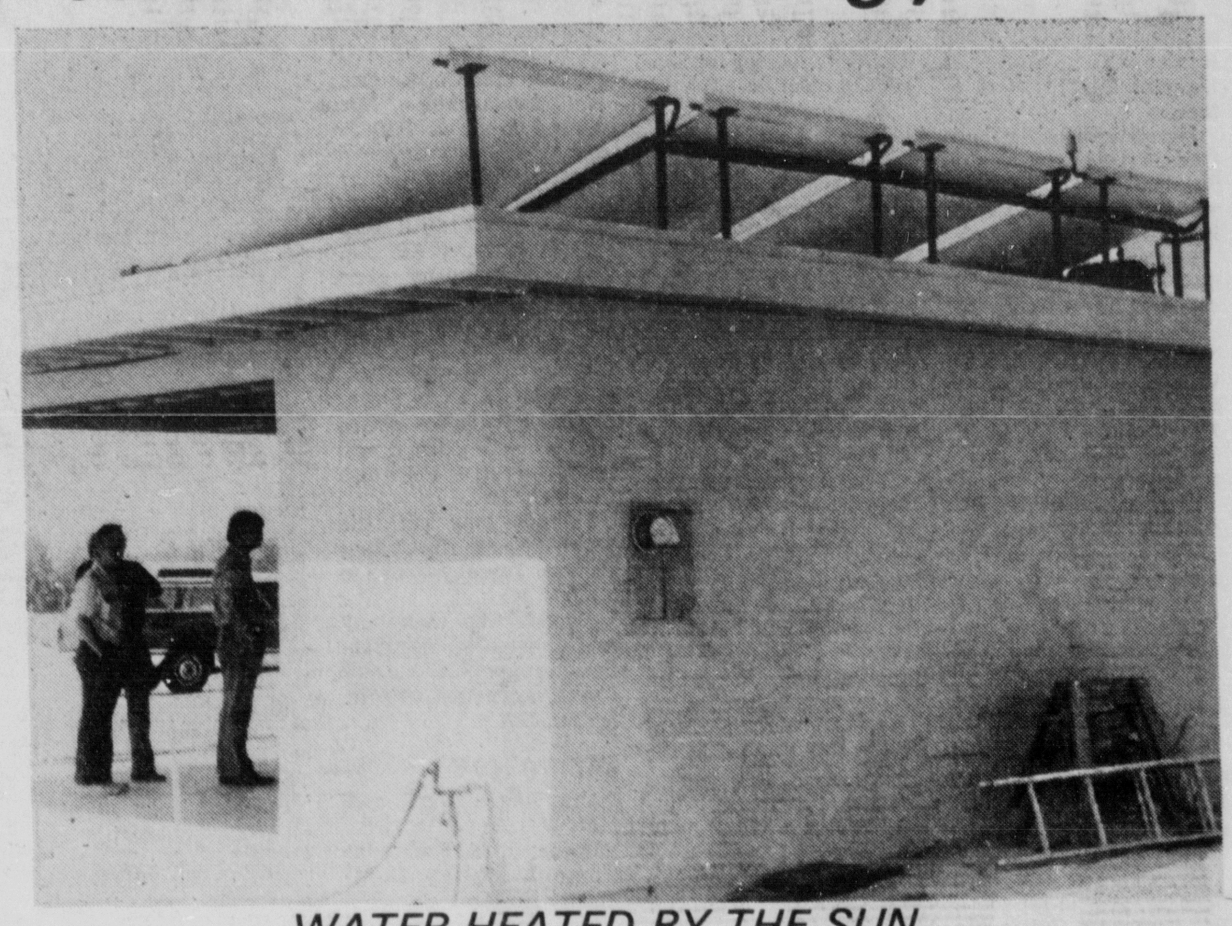
Custom house designed to use solar energy . . .



SOLAR CONSERVATION HOME

Designed to conserve energy, this model house in Cathedral City has a solar heating system which will replace up to 70 per cent of the home's requirements for space and domestic water heating. Styrofoam walls covered with four inches of concrete make the three-bedroom house look much like the Quonset huts of World War II. Solar equipment in the house cost $6,000.

Photos by Joe Gendron



WATER HEATED BY THE SUN

Hardley visible from the street are these solar collector panels on top of the carport which heat water for this energy conservation home erected in Cathedral City. The solar system for the house was designed by the Southern California Edison Co.

. . . bringing industry, consumer together

Local city officials, educators, engineers and representatives of the press were introduced recently to equipment now being manufactured in the Southland to use the sun to heat water for residential use. They were taken by carryall to the desert community of Cathedral City, south of Palm Springs, where they toured a custom house incorporating solar heating equipment. Nearby they visited a brand new industry involved in research and development of solar energy equipment and its manufacture.

The Southern California Edison Co. arranged the tour in connection with its role of serving as a catalyst to bring the solar energy industry and the consumer together. The utility's interest is in helping to develop the use of solar energy to ease the shortage of electricity which the nation faces.

Thus, Edison's solar engineers designed and the company paid for the solar energy system installed in the model house erected by the Thermo Structure Development Co. of Cathedral City.

The L-shaped model house is revolutionary in the use of Styrofoam walls which are covered by four inches of reinforced concrete. Architecturally, the dwelling looks much like the Quonset huts of World War II.

There are no bearing walls inside the three bedroom house which has 1,335 square feet of living space. This provides for flexibility of design in the interior and the concrete walls keep out noise, heat and dirt.

The solar panels used to heat water for the house are located over the carport. Heated water is stored in an underground storage tank from which it may be drawn to replenish a domestic hot water heater and circulated for heating the house in winter.

The solar energy system is designed to replace up to 70 per cent of the fuel requirements of the home's space heating and domestic water heating. Edison representatives plan to work with the family which will soon occupy the house to monitor the system's efficiency in the months ahead. The house, now in escrow, sold for $52,000. It includes some $6,000 in solar equipment.

The second phase of the tour was a visit to Colt Inc. in Rancho Mirage which is doing research and development on solar systems. One of the firm's engineers is Paul Wheeler of Claremont who showed the visitors a plan of the solar system that his company is building for the visitors' center at Yosemite National Park.

Edison Co. officials concede that the cost of solar systems are expensive now but point out that as they become mass produced and receive wider acceptance the cost will drop.

The payback on a system for an average size home varies from seven to 15 years depending on whether the house presently uses gas or electricity for space heating.

Edison representatives said that they are considering rebates to housing developers to encourage the incorporation of solar systems in new residential construction, and to householders who make installations of systems in existing homes.

Among those participating in the tour were Pomona City Administrator Jerry Gonce, Pomona City Councilman Adrian Wright, Claremont Mayor Bertye Smith, City Manager Bob Poff of San Dimas, City Manager Vern Lawson of Walnut, Bill Montgomery, president of Pomona First Federal Savings and Loan Association; La Verne City Councilman Bob Neher; J. Richard Phillips, professor of engineering at Harvey Mudd College; Jack Merritt, a Claremont professor; and Gil Yanow, a Jet Propulsion Laboratory scientist.

2 Pomona officers ambushed targets of gunfire; 7 jailed

Two Pomona policemen were ambushed and fired upon early Saturday morning after being sent to a location where gunshots were reported, officers said.

Seven persons were booked on suspicion of attempted murder after the 2:55 a.m. incident in the 1300 block of South Thomas Avenue, Pomona.

Those arrested include Percy Archileta, 18; Alfred Alaniz, 18; Manual Perez, 19; Alfonso Ortiz, 20; Arthur Vidana, 18; and two 16-year-old youths. All are Pomona residents.

Officers James Armstrong and Paul Hitt had responded in their patrol car to the Thomas Avenue location and were soon fired on from between the homes in the area. The two officers immediately left the area.

A number of officers returned a short time later and Officer David Clark led a foot patrol of the area. The suspects were found in the front yard at 1352 S. Main St., near the ambush site, said Armstrong.

More suspects were captured in an alleyway to the rear of the homes.

Police recovered two .22-caliber rifles in the front yard of 1344 S. Main St. Several live and expended rounds were found in the yard areas of 1352 and 1344 S. Main.

The suspects were booked at the Pomona City Jail. Hitt and Armstrong's patrol car was not damaged.

Police probe assault on drivers, shooting

Pomona police are investigating a series of incidents Saturday in which a man was shot in the neck, a woman robbed and two cars damaged by rocks and bottles.

Carlton Williams, 20, of Pomona was reported in stable condition at County-USC Medical Center in Los Angeles after suffering a gunshot wound in the neck.

Officer Elroy Brabender said the series of incidents occurred at Towne Avenue and Harrison Street about 1:47 a.m. A minor traffic accident involving cars driven by Joan McMillan and Edward Brownell apparently was the first of the incidents.

The drivers were exchanging information when a number of people who were attending a party at 791 Harrison St. began throwing rocks and bottles at the drivers and cars, Brabender said.

During the assault, someone grabbed Ms. McMillan's purse from her car, officers added. Brownell entered his auto and sped off as shots were fired.

One shot, from an unknown weapon, struck Williams, who police said was an onlooker.

The suspects also apparently tried to drag the woman from her car, but she escaped before they could, police indicated.

No suspects have been arrested and an investigation is continuing, according to Brabender.

Hit-run victim dies; motorist surrenders

A 3-year-old Chino boy, struck by a hit-and-run driver outside his home about 6:45 p.m. Friday evening, died a few hours later at Chino General Hospital.

Joel John Guerena III, 13123 14th St. apparently ran out into traffic on 14th Street from behind a parked car and was struck by a car heading south on 14th.

Police had issued an appeal through local newspapers on Saturday for the driver of the vehicle involved to turn herself in to authorities. The appeal worked Saturday night when the woman, after having read the story Saturday, turned herself over to Chino police

Police said the car that struck the child continued on after the collison but later returned with the driver asking about the child's condition. By then, the boy had already been taken to the hospital.

The driver was described by police as a Latin female 18 years old. Police are withholding her name pending further investigation.

Marine found in crash car with arm missing

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A 21-year-old Marine was found in a car near downtown San Diego Saturday, his right arm severed in a hit-and-run accident that had occurred 75 miles away, police said.

Mark Earnest, stationed at the Marine Air Station at Yuma, Ariz., was taken to the Navy hospital, where doctors attempted to restore the severed arm which had been rushed there by the California Highway Patrol.

A CHP officer said Earnest was a passenger in a car being driven west on Interstate 8 near the community of Boulevard by another Marine, Larry Lesniak, 22. Officers said the car sideswiped a westbound truck driven by Charles Boon, 59, of El Cajon, about 1:40 a.m., severing Earnest's arm.

Officers said Lesniak did not stop, but drove 75 miles to San Diego, where the car ran out of gas on a freeway offramp. Police said they found Earnest bleeding but conscious in the car at 2:30 a.m. and took him to the hospital.

A CHP spokesman said Earnest's arm was found at the scene of the accident and was taken to the hospital in a patrol car after officers were contacted by San Diego police.

Lesniak was booked in county jail for investigation of felony drunk driving.

Officers said both men had been drinking.

Pidgeon has surgery for clot on brain

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Walter Pidgeon, the urbane leading man of the 1930s and 1940s, was recovering Saturday after an operation to remove a blood clot on his brain, a source close to the family said.

Pidgeon, admitted to St. John's Hospital in nearby Santa Monica 10 days ago, was operated on Friday night after he took a turn for the worse, the source said. "Barring any complications, he is on the way to recovery," he added.

The 78-year-old actor had fallen while attending a meeting of the Motion Picture Relief Fund on Thursday, Aug. 4, the source said. Pidgeon returned to his home, but was rushed to the hospital when he passed out. He was conscious when he was admitted.

A hospital spokesman would say only that Pidgeon was admitted to the hospital on Aug. 4. He noted that Pidgeon had requested that no information be given out.

Pidgeon was one of filmdom's mainstays during the golden era of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

Born Sept. 23, 1898, in Saint John, Canada, Pidgeon lives in Beverly Hills with his wife, Ruth.

Ontario plant burns; workers evacuated

Approximately 50 workers were forced to evacuate the General Electric plant, 234 E. Main St., Ontario about 3:21 a.m. Saturday morning when a fire erupted in the plant's metal dust collection system causing an estimated $50,000 damage.

Ontario fire officials noted the plant was on its last shift prior to a two to three-week shutdown for its annual maintenance overhaul. The plant manufactures irons and small appliances for General Electric.

One firefigher, Bill Bryant, was treated and released at Ontario Community Hospital for a twisted knee he received combating the blaze.

While five Ontario engine companies plus the snorkel truck were needed to fight the GE fire at 3:21 a.m., Ontario stations received fire calls at 3:01 and 3:54 a.m. at addresses a block apart on South Euclid Avenue.

One of these was at a building occupied by a telephone soliciting business at 1652 S. Euclid Ave. while the other was at a laundramat at 1752 S. Euclid Ave. Both fires are believed to be the work of arsonists. Units from Ontario station two covered the first blaze, but were busy with the GE plant fire requiring units from Montclair and Chino to handle the laundramat fire.

Over 25 firefighters controlled the fire at the GE plant by 4:20 a.m. but required another five hours to complete mopping up operations and to check out the complicated duct network of the dust collection system for remaining embers.

Cause of the fire at the plant, which damaged the collection system, the roof and the duct work, is still under investigation.

Suspect unconscious with drug overdose

A young burglary suspect who had taken an apparent overdose of drugs was arrested by Pomona police early Saturday inside an optometrist's office.

Police, who were not sure of the suspect's name or address, said he was discovered unconscious in the offices of Dr. Jack and Dr. James Worden at 648 N. Park Ave. just after midnight.

An empty vial of seconal capsules was found near the suspect, according to Officer Thomas O'Neil. The man was taken to Pomona Valley Community Hospital where he was reported in stable condition.

O'Neil reported the man was hiding underneath a couch in the doctors' offices, unconscious and with a plastic bag covering his face.

Police had entered the medical building after receiving reports of two men on the roof. They at first thought the suspect was "barricaded" inside, but when they received no response after yelling through a bullhorn, officers went inside.

They later confirmed the man had entered through a vent in the roof.

Officers said the man, about 17 to 19 years old, will be booked on suspicion of burglary after he is released from the hospital. They were unable to confirm his name because he had no identification on him.

Tot nearly electrocuted in bathtub by hair dryer

A 14-month-old Montclair boy nearly electrocuted Friday evening when he pulled an electric hair dryer into his bathtub was thought to be improving Saturday evening in Montclair Doctors Hospital.

James Flynn was listed in fairly guarded condition Saturday night but a hospital spokesman said some improvement had been shown in the child's condition since he was originally listed in critical condition Friday evening.

The boy was not breathing Friday night when pulled from the tub by his mother who had momentarily left the room to get a towel.

Montclair firefighters and paramedics from B and B Ambulance arrived simultaneously to find Montclair police officers administering cardio pulmonary resuscitation to the injured youth at the residence, 9945 Central Ave.

The child reportedly did not begin breathing again for almost 30 minutes as physicians at Doctors Hospital began their efforts to revive him.

Queen off on Scotland holiday

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Queen Elizabeth II sailed off to a holiday in Scotland Thursday night after a tense two-day visit to the British province of Northern Ireland.

Less than an hour before the queen sailed away, a bomb exploded at a West Belfast service station that had been hit earlier in the day.

Another bomb exploded on the grounds of New University of Ulster in Coleraine Thursday night five hours after the 51-year-old British monarch defied a terrorist bomb threat to visit the campus and appeal to Protestants and Roman Catholics to end eight years of sectarian war.

Indian art work on exhibit

CHICAGO (AP) — The wide variety of artistic styles and materials used by native Americans may be seen in a comprehensive exhibition of Indian art at the Art Institute of Chicago.

The exhibition, called "The Native American Heritage: A Survey of North American Indian Art," continues through Oct. 30.

Three years in the making, it includes more than 550 objects, most of them never photographed or shown publicly before. The objects date from about 2500 B.C. to the present. Some 100 prehistoric cultures and historic tribes are represented.

Aside from their historical and cultural interest, many of the objects are inherently exciting and fascinating. That socalled primitive people could render such sophisticated work with the tools and materials at hand is a source of constant wonder.

This exhibition, which will be seen only at the Art Institute, was drawn from more than 80 museums and private collections in the United States and Europe. It was organized by Dr. Evan Maurer, the museum's curator of primitive art.

Included are examples of weaving, basketry, pottery, wood carving, stone carving, painting, beadwork, and woven and sewn porcupine quill work.

The exhibition is divided into six geographic areas.

President's 'stall' on White House Mess still a puzzle

By TOM TIEDE

WASHINGTON (NEA) —Shortly after becoming president, Jimmy Carter was given a list of White House traditions in need of reform. One was the staff use of chauffeured limousines. Another was the presence of hundreds of office television sets. Then there was the White House Mess: it was staffed entirely with Philippines servants.

In the first months of his term Carter has reconsidered the excessive use of limousines, and TV appliances, but he has yet to act regarding the Philippine servants. This minority group remains almost exclusively in charge of the dining room dirty work, and even the staunchest of Carter loyalists are surprised that he lets it go on.

One of the president's publicists, who is part black and part American Indian, says he is "bothered" by the imagery of the situation. He suggests it's not right for mostly white bureaucrats to be waited on by all brown minions. Other staff members say the whole thing smells of "Col. Blimp," a reference to reckless colonialism.

In fact, the Filipino servants are a remnant of the colonial era. When the United States acquired the Philippines as a territorial prize of the Spanish-American war, the Navy began enlisting its nationals as messboys. Since the Navy also operated the White House Mess, the Filipino servants were soon ministering to presidents and staffs.

The practice continued without question until the 1930s, when Eleanor Roosevelt moved into the executive mansion. It was the Depression, a time of continuing joblessness. Roosevelt did not object to having minority servants, but she insisted they be of an American minority; she replaced the Filipinos with jobless blacks.

The Negro community was never happy with the Roosevelt plan. It appreciated the jobs, but it said it would rather see black men in suits than aprons. Also, many of the black stewards themselves felt slighted; they said they hadn't joined the Navy to be waiters. After World War II, most blacks were gone from the White House Mess.

Since then, the reliance has been almost completely on Filipinos. Presently there are nearly 60 of them working in the White House. They serve, usher, and are responsible for kitchen police (cleaning, scrubbing, hauling). No white people serve as stewards; the only non-Filipinos are a couple of Guamanians and one Mexican-American.

In addition to their regular duties, the Filipinos also have secondary responsibilities. In 1974, Sen. William Proxmire reported that Navy stewards were being pressed into after-hours service as waiters at White House and other private parties. White House sources say this is less frequent now, but "it has not been totally eliminated."

And too, the Filipinos are assigned to serve Vice President Walter Mondale at his home. The duty there is mostly kitchen work. One steward who worked for the last vice president, Nelson Rockefeller, says he occasionally shined shoes. In the past, stewards have accompanied vice presidents to serve as man servants and bag carriers.

The Navy sees to it that the Filipinos are well trained for this labor. Of some 22,000 Filipinos in service now, half are rated as "mess management personnel," which can mean anything from busboy to admiral's valet. Proxmire tells of many Filipinos who spend a good deal of time waxing the private cars of high officers.

For its part the Navy says it treats enlisted men from the Philippines with democratic intentions. Time was when Filipinos were only allowed to enlist as servants, but the Navy says this changed in the 1960s. Filipinos now occupy many ratings; the Navy Press Office has a staffer who has climbed from steward to commander.

Still, the White House Mess tradition lives on. And it's often to the embarrassment of dining room visitors. A member of the Philippine Embassy remembers eating at the mess and "feeling as if they were going to ask me to clear the dishes." Embassy consultant A.L. Valencia says the situation is "uncomfortable for every Filipino."

This discomfort was particularly severe during the Ford administration. The former president often took Philippine servants with him during foreign travel. And as if this use of a minority were not flagrant enough, Ford also arranged, in 1975, to have the Filipinos in tow during an official visit to the Philippines.

Philippine diplomats say now that they wanted to protest Ford's careless gaffe, but it was out of their hands. So far as the White House Filipinos are concerned, the embassy has no authority. Valencia points out that White House stewards must be naturalized Americans, so if a problem exists it is a domestic racial problem.

Does a problem exist? Sen. Proxmire says yes, the Navy says no, and Jimmy Carter is yet to be heard from on the subject. One thing is certain, however: the White House is the only chief executive's mansion in the Western world where dining guests are served by people who have been imported from another country for the purpose.

Misdial puts him in jail

ROCKAWAY, N.J. (AP) — Police give this account of Bruce Rosenzweig's telephone misdialing that landed him in jail:

Rosenzweig dialed the number of a prospective customer for some marijuana he had for sale. Someone else answered the telephone, a deal was hatched anyway for four pounds of marijuana and two hours later Rosenzweig, 20, and two friends were arrested on drug charges.

FEMINISTS — Italian women march down a street in Rome with a banner proclaiming their cause. Europe's most visible feminists today are in Italy, but they have increasingly militant counterparts in Spain and Portugal.

But 'Mad Minas' have doused their corsets

European 'feminists' march in streets for more rights

EDITOR'S NOTE: Women's lib marches are almost a thing of the past in Northern Europe, but they're picking up steam in the south. While Northerners are working behind the scenes to put to practice the rights they've won on paper, their Southern sisters are trying to catch up.

ROME (AP) — Holland's "Mad Minas" some years ago stopped burning corsets in the streets, but Italian feminists today march 50,000 strong to vent their anger over the defeat of pro-abortion legislation or the gang rape of a young girl.

The disappearance of the "Mad Minas" is symbolic of satisfaction gained by feminists in Northern Europe after winning legislation to guarantee equality with men — on paper, anyway.

By contrast, the shouting of Italian feminists is a sign of increasing militancy in Latin countries of Southern Europe where women are trying to catch up with their sisters north of the Alps and the Pyrenees. Even Portugal and Spain, after decades of dictatorial governments and Latin sexist codes, are discovering that modern democracy brings with it demands of equality for women.

Throughout Europe there are examples of women in high government positions, women working alongside men in the factories — with at least the legal guarantee of equal pay — and they have won equal rights within marriage and the family.

Britain's Margaret Thatcher heads the opposition Conservative Party and could become England's first woman prime minister. In France, Health Minister Simone Weil pushed through one of Europe's most liberal abortion laws, and there was a cabinet-level post for women's affairs until Francoise Giraud moved to the Culture Ministry in a cabinet shuffle. Italy got its first woman cabinet member last year when Tina Anselmi took over the Labor Ministry.

Despite laws of equal pay for equal work in many countries, women still face barriers in the work force, often settling for low paying jobs and being among the first fired in a crunch. But most countries have passed laws guaranteeing at least theoretical equality, with England, Belgium and Portugal passing equal pay for equal work laws in the last two years.

Within the marriage contract, Belgium has passed laws calling for equality of parents and of husband and wife. France passed a law allowing a woman to have a bank account without her husband's consent.

In Denmark, family equality has swung full circle to a fight for men's rights. In court decisions last year, mothers were granted custody of children in 21,000 of 24,000 divorce cases. Karen Dahlerup, chairwoman of the state-sponsored equal rights commission, says, "There is an ominous degree of discrimination against men in divorce cases. Our society seems unable to accept that men have emotions and feelings, too."

With so many battles won, feminists have become quieter in Northern Europe. Gone are the days of the early 1970s when Holland's "Mad Minas" tied pink ribbons across public toilets for men only, stood on street corners wolf-whistling at men and burned corsets near the statue of 19th-century sufragette Cibmina "Mina" Drucker in Amsterdam.

But leaders of the feminist movement insist it is not dying.

"There has been a shift away from purely feminine problems to family matters," a spokeswoman for West Germany's Women's Council said. "Things have become more quiet now, but in fact we are asked far more often than in the past to cooperate in every sphere of public life."

Belgian feminists say more and more men and women are thinking about true equality. Swedish feminists say they are increasingly involved in day-to-day political issues such as day nurseries and work time.

But there has been an undeniable shift in visibility for feminist causes in Italy, Portugal and Spain.

In Rome, a 16th century building in the city center is painted with graffiti: "My body is mine ... Fifty per cent of jobs to women ... Abortion is my business." Inside are members of the "Women's Liberation Movement," who have occupied the four-story building and turned it into a base of operations to give advice on contraceptives, sponsor seminars and publish a magazine.

The "Women's Liberation Movement" is allied with the small leftist Radical Party. The Communist Party supports the larger "Union of Italian Women." In addition, there are hundreds of independent feminist organizations in Italy.

Feminists in Italy have supported those who defy tradition to report rapes, and a group of high school girls recently held a public trial of a youth accused of rape and beat a friend who tried to rescue him.

In Portugal, wives couldn't leave the country without their husband's consent, and the husband had a right to read his wife's mail. The new government changed most of that and set up a committee on the status of women which reports

Frank Bolz is ready to talk until surrender

Cool heads prevail when N.Y. hostage team arrives

EDITOR'S NOTE: The guy may be mad at his wife and threat threaten to throw their baby out the window to get even. He may be down on his luck and see a free ride on a hijacked airplane as his only way out. He may be part of an extremist group which takes people as political pawns. No matter the personality or the problem, Frank Bolz is ready to talk until surrender. He's head of the NYPD hostage team.

NEW YORK (AP) — The next time some psycho grabs hostages in New York, chances are he'll come up against a gregarious and very patient detective named Frank Bolz.

Bolz is the police department's expert in talking captors into freeing their captives without bloodshed.

Bolz is dead serious when he tells you, "When that bullet leaves the gun, it's irretrievable. It's gone. It could hit him and go through him and hit somebody else.

"It could deflect off a window and go some place else. It might not hit him at all, and it might spark him off to kill other people."

All these possibilities are what Frank Bolz wants to avoid. As head of the New York City Police Department' hostage team, he is dedicated to not firing that bullet.

The New York unit has been remarkably successful in the more than 80 cases it has handled. It was formed after the Munich Olympics hostage-taking and is a pioneer, training other police groups from the FBI to the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, from officers in Medicine Hat and Moosejaw in Canada to police in Munich and Israel.

Bolz and others in the 70-member team were trained in part by a police detective with a masters degree in psychology, Harvey Schlossberg, who has a knack for putting academic ideas into words police can believe in. Besides that, Bolz says, the basic qualification is just liking people, which includes a kind of intuitive sensitivity.

On the July 4 weekend at John F. Kennedy Airport, he and his negotiating team talked a man out of his hostages in a hijacked bus, but not without the loss of life. It was the first time in the four years since the hostage team was formed that there was bloodshed.

"You know he could have been taken out. A few times we had the opportunity," Bolz recalls. "But you have to wait. You have to weigh the situation."

"You hear people say, 'Why don't you blow the guy away? You just can't do that. There are so many intangibles, so many ramifications, so many facets, so many things going in different directions you have to consider."

The object is, of course, to save lives, "everybody's life, including the perpetrator's."

To do that requires extraordinary patience. In negotiating with an armed man and his helpless hostages, the slightest thing can touch off violence. He must be constantly reassured. Bolz always uses "Mister," the title of respect, when talking to him, bolstering what he knows is a battered sensitive ego.

It takes patience, marathon talking, and careful choice of words and ideas. Bolz, 47, is a natural in the job, his voice reduced by polyps to a kind of Bil! Bendix nasality that comes across as gentle and kind.

NEGOTIATOR — N.Y.P.D. Detective Frank Bolz is a specialist at saving lives — both hostages' and captors'.

"Once we get established in a situation, we realize we are dealing with the anxieties of the person inside. We sometimes have to ignore the hostage. At least it seems that way, because we're dealing head to head with the perpetrator. If we can solve his problem, nobody will get killed."

Bolz encounters three main types in his work: The professional criminal who is interrupted and takes hostages for his protection, the psychotic personality, and the terrorist.

In each case, if a hostage hasn't been killed immediately, Bolz knows that the intention is not to kill and that there's a chance to work things out.

"We try to contain the persons in the smallest area possible, through the use of the Emergency Service Division — our firearms battalion. "It's a well-trained, well-disciplined group that's one of the keys to our effort.

"Three things are of major importance: Intelligence, communication, and discipline of firepower. It's something they know is there, but you don't have to directly to Premier Mario Soares.

Public demonstrations of bra and broom burning such as were mustered immediately after the revolution have been abandoned as too dangerous because of attacks by male spectators. But feminists are working hard to fully implement the equal pay law. They also are working for legislation to legalize abortion and end some 100,000 backstreet operations each year.

In post-Franco Spain, there are about 200 feminist groups today. They are demonstrating against such laws as those which punish a married woman who "lies down with a man who is not her husband" with prison terms of up to six years, while the husband is penalized only if he has his "mistress inside the conjugal home or notoriously outside it."

Spanish feminists also are fighting against negotiations between the government and the Vatican on divorce laws, with restrictions of divorce to those married civilly.

"The right to divorce has been recognized by all civilized countries. It cannot be 'negotiated' between the government and the church behind the backs of the citizens," one feminist leader said.

"Besides, limiting divorce to those married civilly would benefit only a small minority since those getting married were obliged to do so in the church during the last 40 years."

For most Eskimos

Caribou changes 'dietary' habits

KOTZEBUE, Alaska (AP) — Dick Curtis, a subsistence hunter for most of his 57 years, is caught between a flat rock and a hammer.

On the other hand, a spectacular decrease in the number of animals in the Western Arctic caribou herd has eliminated one of the staples of his family's diet.

And on the other, grocery prices in this community of 2,400 are among the highest in the nation. A shopping trip is a painful journey for Curtis, an Eskimo, who earned only $9,000 last year.

The prices reflect the problem: carrots, 75 cents a pound; milk, $2.89 a half-gallon; ground beef, $1.79 a pound; frying chicken, $1.39 a pound; butter, $1.83 a pound; white bread, $1.20 for a one-pound loaf.

"No, we don't go without," says Curtis' wife, Lily, of the 13 people who live in Curtis' five-room house. "We manage, but it's tough."

Caribou was a major diet item for the Curtises, along with seal and whale meat, salmon, shee fish, wild rhubarb, berries and wild greens such as sour dock.

But the state put caribou off-limits earlier this year to protect a herd that had dropped from 240,000 to 50,000 animals in the period between 1970 and 1976.

Biologists for the state say the major factor in the drop has been human and animal predation on the herd. They say that wolves, on the increase in the area, may take as many as 10,000-15,000 a year. Another 25,000-30,000 caribou, by state estimates were being taken annually by native subsistence hunters in the years just before the herd was placed off-limits.

The state Department of Fish and Game says there is no evidence that construction of the trans-Alaska oil pipeline played a part in the herd's decline. The traditional range, and the calving grounds, of the herd lie to the west of the pipeline.

Curtis, who earned only $4,000 as a commercial fisherman and $5,000 as a part-time plumber in 1976, and his wife have three children at home.

The household also includes two relatives and six children who are wards of the state. Alaska provides for their needs.

"If the fishing is good, I probably won't buy groceries for the winter, and before the 1976 commercial salmon season I was doing okay," says Curtis. "I made enough to put a little away and then live off the land.

"But last year the fishing season was rotten, and I hardly worked. It seems like the more money I make the more I spend on meat, with no caribou available."

Lily Curtis adds:

"When he was hunting caribou we had meat all year around, meat and fish. But this year, nothing, we have to buy it."

John W. Schaeffer, an Eskimo leader in this area, says the loss of caribou has left a tremendous void in the diets of the people here and in other communities along the arctic coast.

Marguerite Stetson, nutritionist with the University of Alaska's Cooperative Extension Service, says Eskimo nutrition has suffered by changes in diet.

"When they used native foods, they fared much better nutritionally than they do in using more the so-called white man's food," she said.

"For instance, in the old days they pounded caribou bones into a meal and ate that, mixed with other foods. And that provided the nutrient they are most likely to be short in, calcium.

"They use little milk, except a bit in their coffee, or their tea, so getting enough calcium is a problem.

"There also is a problem nutritionally with iron, particularly with school-age children in the rural areas. They aren't getting enough iron. If they were eating the old foods they would."

"When you're having to live off the land, the biggest problem is not that the food couldn't provide all the necessary nutrition, but having it available continually," Mrs. Stetson said.

"If they followed the old ways and utilized everything, they would put things down in seal oil so they could eat them all winter, things like willow leaves.

"Willow leaves are very, very high in vitamin C, and they maintain a high level of vitamin C as long as they are stored in a nonoxygen area, which the seal oil provides.

"Their old ways were very nutritious, and I'm all for promoting it, where they can still use those old ways."

SOBER EYES — Like many youngsters around the world, this boy in Mae Sa Mai, Thailand, wears a sober expression and a dirty face. But the silver chain and other ornaments mark him as a member of a mountain tribe of Meo, the group found in parts of south China, Burma, Laos, Thailand where they are well known for their cultivation of opium in an area that supports rich crops.

Newfangled thing

Cartercar was tough, gearless

DETROIT (AP) — In 1901, a bicycle salesman in Jackson, Mich., thought of a different drive principle for those newfangled things called automobiles. He called it a Cartercar.

Only Byron Carter didn't use gears. Instead, he set up a system of two perpendicular wheels. The result was a car with an infinite number of gears and a thousand speeds.

The car cost about $1,600 and averaged 10.5 miles per gallon of gasoline — a gas-guzzler by today's standards. The lightweight, two-cylinder machine may not have been President Carter's answer to energy conservation or auto emission, but had its day.

In 1908, to celebrate the nomination of John Kern as running mate to presidential candidate William Jennings Bryan, about 10 husky young Hoosiers jammed into a Cartercar and tooled six miles to the Indiana Fairgrounds.

Midgets Mrs. General Tom Thumb and Count Magri demonstrated the Cartercar, which could climb a 50 per cent grade fully loaded.

Cartercars, built from 1905 to 1915, were sold to Detroit department store J. L. Hudson's and the cereal maker, Kellogg Co. in Battle Creek, Mich. In March 1906, the Hudson's car traveled 1,172 miles and averaged 12 mph.

A special Cartercar was built for the paymaster of Detroit after several foot patrols had been robbed and the city's paychecks stolen. The Cartercar was a "bank on wheels" — it had a special locked compartment in the rear to thwart thugs.

Byron Carter's first model, road-ready in 1903, was a runabout on a 75-inch wheelbase that weighed only 650 pounds. A patent was granted in 1904. Its two-cylinder, air-cooled engine was up front under the hood. The car, called a Carter, was said to be a cheap and reliable.

In 1905, Carter and several backers took $150,000 and formed the Motorcar Co. in Detroit. Carter was second vice president and the new cars were called Cartercars. Three years later, the firm became the Cartercar Co.

There were 101 cars produced in the 1906 model year. According to several reports, the three models had the same machinery but interchangeable tops — a delivery vehicle, a racy roadster and a sedate five-passenger coupe. This was one way to keep up with the Joneses, who would think you had three cars when it was reallyjust one body underneath. The idea was soon dropped.

Cartercars for 1909 had an enclosed chain casing, eliminating the worry that a loose stone would wrench the chain off the sprockets. That year, two new four-cylinder Cartercars hit the market. One had 24 horsepower and one 30 h.p. They sold for $1,000, fully equipped.

Cartercars kept getting bigger and more luxurious. Prices reached $1,875 in 1911 for a touring car with a 40 h.p. engine, a top, windshield and speedometer.

But Cartercar and its friction patent was one of 30 small automakers bought out by William Durant, president of a fledgling company called General Motors. GM began taking more and more control of Carter, and by 1915, the Cartercar didn't even look like its predecessors.

Soon after that, Carter Co. stock fell. By the fall all Cartercars had been sold. That was it. No more Cartercars.

In friction drive, the engine moved a polished disc at a constant speed. A spoked wheel was perpendicular and the friction came when the spoked wheel touched the polished disc.

The driver controlled the speed by moving a hand gear back and forth. That moved the spoked wheel across the face of the moving disc. The faster you wanted to go, the farther you moved the wheel toward the edge of the disc.

There were other, unrelated Carter Cars. One was built in Washington, D.C., and Detroit between 1909 and 1912. It had two side-by-side engines, one of which could be disengaged if less energy was needed. Another Carter was built in the same plant. Production lasted six months.

A third Carter, Richard of Gulfport, Miss., built a steam Carter in 1919-20.

No one says much about the Cartercar today, except that maybe the perfect one would run on peanut oil. But the legacy of bicycle salesman Byron Carter lives on.

SAVING LIVES — Hostage negotiator Frank Bolz holds an offering of beer aloft as he negotiates with a robber holding people in a New York City bank. After eight hours of talk the man surrendered and hostages were released.

brandish it ... We don't threaten anybody."

"They build up a tremendous amount of frustration in dealing with the bureaucracy," Bolz says of the hostage-takers with personality problems. "Perhaps they can't accomplish what they want to accomplish. They hit a stone wall in every direction they go. And now they feel, 'listen to me, somebody.'"

Bolz lends the captor his undivided attention then tries to convince him that he's accomplished his moment on center stage and would do best to surrender.

If the criminal is at a high pitch of anxiety, so are the police and the negotiators. "You have to stay scared all the time," Bolz says. "If you're not afraid, you're in trouble. You know that what you do - a word, a sentence, a movement, a decision — can cost a life."

However delicate the negotiations, "your tactical commander of the inner perimeter is under heavy crisis, too. He's got to be ready to go in on an assault at a moment's notice. Because if the guy kills one, a second, a third, you have to go."

In long negotiations, there's a certain transference of emotions and feelings. Sanity demands that the negotiator build a sort of emotional wall. And if he gets bad vibes about the captor, he is trained to back out and let someone more neutral take over.

And "we never lie to anybody," Bolz says. "We'd rather not answer a question than lie. Once our credibility is gone we're lost."

Bolz isn't altogether happy with heavy TV coverage of hostage situations. His wife says that if he gets shot, they won't have to send the chaplain around to tell her. She'll have seen it on the screen.

"One thing I try to make sure is that I never leave home without kissing my wife, because you never know if you'll come back."

Something's fishy about their jobs

MARTINSVILLE, Ind. (AP) — Talk about life in a goldfish bowl and the folks at Grassy Forks will understand.

In the last 78 years, the hatchery has raised billions of the little fish, providing much of the supply for the United States and Canada.

"We got 'em, don't we? They are beautiful, aren't they?" said Ira U. Massey, 72, with a grin. "Just look at them all."

The goldfish are raised in 500 ponds that dot the 900-acre hatchery in Morgan County hills southwest of Indianapolis. Grassy Forks once had the distinction of being the world's largest producer of goldfish — a title Italy now claims.

A staff of about 30 raise the fish and arrange for their sale.

Juvenile diversion project gains new lease on life

Success is key to new prosperity

By BOB NAGEY
PB Staff Writer

The Pomona Valley Juvenile Diversion Project, which is taking credit for having turned more than 2,000 valley youth away from crime during the past three years, apparently has a new lease on life.

Given up as virtually dead despite its success because its three-year federal grant ran out June 30, the project has bounced back with new money that will enable it to not only continue but expand its operation.

Larry Rubin, director of the project, says the program's budget is going from $250,000 last year to more than $400,000 in the year that begins Monday.

Financed as a pilot program since 1974 by the federal Law Enforcement Assistance Administration (LEAA), the project awaits formal action by the Los Angeles County Board of Supervisors to qualify for Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA) funds.

But CETA is only one of several financial sources this year. The project also is drawing assistance from five valley cities it serves, from the California Youth Authority (CYA), from the federally-funded Office of Criminal Justice Planning and from the state's training program under the Department of Health.

To qualify for the county's sponsorship, the project will have to be merged with two of its counterparts in the San Gabriel Valley.

A steering committee composed of county as well as diversion project representatives will set policy for the enlarged group, but Rubin insists that each of the community-based projects will remain independent.

If the project can prove that it can divert juveniles from crime more cheaply and more effectively than present agencies do, other parts of the county also will try it.

Basically, the diversion project deals with children who have gotten into trouble with the law or in school or who can't be controlled by their parents.

They are counseled, given jobs when possible and redirected.

Rubin claims that of the 2,000 children handled in the past three years, only 16 per cent have returned to criminal behavior. He says the cost of diverting the juveniles has been averaging about $200 each.

The young clients range in age from five to 17.

Since the Pomona Valley project started as a pilot three years ago, other parts of Los Angeles County also have established similar models through federal funding.

Rubin says there now are 13 projects throughout the county, each financed by the government for three years. When the funding runs out, all of those projects are expected to turn to the county for support.

Rubin says that under the proposed plan the county will give no financial support, but will permit the use of CETA funds in its care to be used for subsidy.

As for the Pomona Valley project, CETA is expected to provide $150,000 in cities of Pomona, Claremont, La Verne, San Dimas and Walnut; another $170,000 in good-faith money; the CYA $50,000; Justuce Planning about $35,000 and the state Health Department, an undetermined amount. Rubin is counting on $85,000 from the department.

The extra money will be used in the all-important field of career and vocational planning. It will enable the project to provide individual counselors for clients who will advise them about career choices and opportunities.

In the meantime, the youth will be trained for jobs and will be given work under the CETA provisions.

To provide more counselors, the diversion project will train interns for 14 positions that deal with youths and their problems. Rubin said trainees will be paid $100 a month and those who are interested may apply to his office right now.

In the program to counsel, train and place the youths into jobs, the project will contract with 14 local agencies, the director said.

Retiree finds interest in his search for beauty

W. F. "Bill" Asmus of Montclair has a tailor-made retirement.

He hunts, cuts, polishes and creates beautiful pieces of jewelry from semi-precious stones.

He has 600 exotic orchid plants in his greenhouse.

At 70, Asmus says he enjoys "lapidary-gemstone faceting, orchid culture, photography, fishing, golf, tinkering and girl watching."

He took an early retirement from General Dynamics in 1965 at 58 after 25 years in the engineering design field.

Reynolds dining hall is dedicated

Dedication of the Donald W. Reynolds Dining Hall at Camp Glen Lipscomb of Old Baldy Council, Boy Scouts of America, was held recently at the camp.

The campsite, part of the 464 acres of the Holcomb Valley Scout Reservation, is located three miles north of Big Bear Lake. Since the land was purchased and camping facilities developed for 240 scouts, the food preparation has been done by the troops in the individual tenting areas.

According to Ron Brundage, council executive, it was decided last year that there would be an increase of scouts involved in the summer camping program if provisions for central feeding could be provided.

The Donald W. Reynolds Foundation, Inc., provided the funds for building the dining hall.

The structure is of steel set on a concrete base with the four sides open. Seating can be provided for 200 under the steel roof which is fortified against heavy snow load.

At the dedication, Jerry Gonce, council president, welcomed the guests, Mr. and Mrs. Jay Holmes, and the council board members, Theo Nowak, Bud Girard and Rick Little and their families.

Girard, camp development chairman, told the group, "We had a great camp and a great camp program, but we weren't getting enough kids. We knew there was a basic ingredient missing, so we got together a camp promotion team, and we all agreed the missing ingredient was central feeding."

Due to the new dining hall, Brundage said this year there will be 600 scouts camping over the five week camping period in contrast to 250 last summer. It costs each scout $45 for a week at camp.

Old Baldy Council, Boy Scouts of America, serves some 7,000 young people from 8 to 18 years in the Pomona Valley and West End.

The council was incorporated in 1947, and in 1966 a group of scouters felt it necessary to purchase and develop a camping facility. The land purchased is located near Big Bear Lake in Holcomb Valley at a 7,200 foot elevation in the San Bernardino Mountains.

The camp now has the new Donald W. Reynolds Dining Hall, a kitchen and supply area with cabinets and counters built by Robert Ransom, a commissary, trading post, first aid quarters, underground gas and electrical pipelines and sanitary facilities.

The kitchen equipment was supplied through monies raised by the Women's Service Boards of the Mt. Baldy Council.

Loren Baldwin is the year-round ranger who lives on the camp grounds with his wife, Maureen, and King, a German police dog. Mrs. Baldwin serves as camp cook during the summer. Paul Warner is camp director, and Tim Martz is assistant camp director and program director.

The camp grounds provide opportunities for the Boy Scouts to work on a wide variety of merit badges including swimming (a pool was built with funds provided by Kaiser Steel Foundation), riflery, crafts and archery.

Because of Medicare

Elderly patients must pay more

By VONNE ROBERTSON
PB Staff Writer

A Claremont physician who specializes in care of the elderly says patients who pay their own bills are being charged more than necessary to offset the inadequate reimbursements from Medicare and Medi-Cal billings.

"The law requires me to charge all patients alike for the same service," says Dr. Charles Gill, who has been in general practice in the valley for 30 years.

"My basic unit charge is $15 for an office call. I may charge more units for calls made to nursing homes or the hospital, based upon the length of the visit," says Dr. Gill. "If charges were reimbursed at a full rate, I could reduce the fee slightly and still have a small profit.

"But it is illegal for me to charge Medicare $15 for a service and then charge some other patient a dollar or two less. Yet, from December 1975 until just recently, Medicare-Medi-Cal paid me $9.22 for this unit. Now they have gone up to $11.04 for some patients and only pay $6 for another group.

"This is less than my overhead cost per patient visit," reports the physician. He adds that much of the inadequate reimbursements arise from billings for patients who are in convalescent hospitals.

"It's estimated that 175 million Americans visit the doctor four or five times a year. If the doctors have to charge $1 or $2 more than they wanted or needed to do, how much is the public suffering from the Medicare-Medi-Cal program requirements?" asks Dr. Gill.

He feels the payment system is boosting the cost to patients who pay their own bills perhaps a billion dollars a year.

Dr. Gill has extensive records to prove that there is no consistency in the reimbursement schedule. He has been paid $5.12, $7.68, $9.60, $15 or nothing at all for the same service.

Patients, too, suffer in another way from the reimbursement policies, adds the geriatric specialist. For a patient who has Medicare only, there is a $60 deductible before bills are paid, based upon the amount Medicare ap-

Wanted: a better excuse

Ever since this country took its first reluctant steps four years ago to confront what has come to be known as the "energy crisis," the petroleum industry has offered the same facile explanation whenever critics have complained about unconscionable profits.

All the "easy oil" has been discovered and is rapidly being depleted, the oil companies retort. What remains — offshore deposits thousands of feet beneath the ocean surface on the continental shelf, inaccessible fields in the frozen tundra of Alaska's North Slope and elsewhere — is far more expensive to locate, bring to the surface and transport to refineries.

Therefore, the industry argument continues, substantial profits are necessary to generate the large amounts of capital required for future production. "Higher future earnings will be required for the capital expenditures necessary to meet the energy needs of the nation," explains Shell.

Texaco quotes a Chase Manhattan Bank study estimating that between 1970 and 1985 "the petroleum industry will need $1.35 trillion . . . for exploration and development expenditures, debt service, dividend payments and other energy industry financial requirements."

An Exxon press release says Board Chairman J.K. Jamieson "emphasized that an adequate return on investment is necessary for financing the capital expenditures needed to develop energy sources."

But Exxon is developing more than energy sources. It has pumped $76 million in "seed money" into an affiliate called Exxon Enterprises, Inc. That subsidiary, in turn, has provided substantial financial support for more than two dozen new enterprises, most of which have nothing whatever to do with energy development.

As a result, Exxon now has invested in companies producing air pollution measuring equipment, graphite shafts for golf clubs and fishing rods, telecopiers, computerized typewriters and telephone answering equipment.

Gulf President Z.D. Benner complained in early 1974 that the energy shortage was caused not by "the monopolistic oil companies" but by other forces including "lower return on capital (which) tended to dry up the availability of risk capital."

But only two months earlier, Gulf abandoned plans to pay $800 million for the CNA Financial Corp. And two months after Bonner's statement, Gulf also scrapped plans to purchase the nation's biggest circus, Ringling Bros.-Barnum & Bailey Combined Shows, Inc.

Atlantic Richfield has bought a daily newspaper in Great Britain and the Anaconda Co., a major copper producer. Standard Oil of California has purchased a 20 per cent interest in Amax, Inc., a metal mining firm.

Mobil last year purchased Marcor, Inc., a holding company composed of Montgomery Ward & Co. and the Container Corp. of America. The purchase price was never revealed but one reliable estimate places it at $1.8 billion.

Mobil has a real estate subsidiary which is building residential housing in Hong Kong and San Francisco's suburbs. The company also has considered purchasing newspapers in New York, California and Colorado.

In April of this year, Mobil bowed out of a fierce bidding war for the purchase of the Irvine Co., but not before it had offered $336 million for the real estate company which owns the sprawling 78,000-acre Irvine Ranch in Orange County.

The industry argues that the continuing congressional threat of federally imposed divestiture requirements, either horizontal or vertical, makes diversification a necessary defense mechanism.

In fact, the oil companies have as much right as other firms to diversify their holdings. But the record shows that the time has come for them to produce a better excuse to justify their higher market prices and higher profits.

Thoughts

And he said to them, "Why are you afraid, O men of little faith?" Then he rose and rebuked the winds and the sea; and there was a great calm. And the men marveled, saying, "What sort of man is this, that even winds and sea obey him?" — Matthew 8:26, 27.

Objects to Kiss comics

Dear Editor:

As a child I spent many enjoyable hours reading about my favorite superheroes such as Superman, Batman, Aquaman and all of the others in the Marvel comic book series. But it now saddens me to learn that the publishing company will be adding to the rebelliousness and promiscuity of young people with its new KISS comic books.

As minister of youth at Montclair Grace Brethren Church I am very concerned about the morals and attitudes of all young people. I, along with many others, feel that rock music has been one of the primary causes of teen-age rebellion, drug abuse, alcoholism and premarital sex. This is the message of many rock songs. I have had young men tell me that they got into drugs and alcohol because of rock music.

To quote the publisher of Marvel comics, "Superman and the other old superheroes are so pristine, so virginal. They are so clean and wholesome and good . . . The old comic book heroes are so clean in a world that's so filthy. That's why the Kiss comic books are going to work and be a hit."

He said further that Kiss may appeal to "the baser qualities of human nature," but that he feels this decadence will not hurt the sale of Kiss comics but will enhance it.

I feel that young people today have enough problems and face more than their share of pressures. They do not need heroes like Kiss. The only possible purpose behind a series like the Kiss comics is money, but that is a little like selling your soul!

I know many ministers in the area. We are all urging our young people and adults to have nothing to do with the Kiss comics and to have nothing to do with Marvel comics as long as the Kiss series remains in publication.

Further, the congregations are being told not to do business with any stores which carry Marvel comics and the store managers will be told that as long as they carry Marvel comics we will have nothing to do with them.

Many minister friends of mine, myself included, are contacting their fellow ministers throughout the state and the country and encouraging them to put the same program into effect. I hope that this will not be a long boycott because I feel that Marvel does put out some very good comic book series. But as long as the Kiss comics remain on the market we will continue our silent protest.

Oil profits come first

WASHINGTON — There is depressing, new evidence that some of the nation's great corporations are more concerned about their profits than the lives of their workers.

A federal study has found, for example, that 150,000 petroleum and petrochemical workers now risk their lives producing and processing benzene.

This grim study, conducted by the National Institute of Occupational Health and Safety, linked benzene to the deadly cancer leukemia. An alarmed Labor Dept. ordered strict standards to protect the workers.

"The evidence is overwhelming," declared Labor Secretary Ray Marshall. "The need to act is urgent." He, therefore, set tough, new limits on benzene exposure.

Yet the giant oil and chemical corporations, instead of rushing to protect the lives of their workers, consulted their ledgers and complained that the new standards would cost too much.

Result: These companies are now engaged in an intensive campaign to kill the government regulations. Their Washington lobbying organization, the American Petroleum Institute, is spreading the word.

"Extensive medical surveillance extending over many years," the institute is claiming, "has failed to uncover adverse health effects from benzene occupational exposure in the petroleum industry."

These reassuring claims, however, conflict with the published findings of the industry's own medical experts. As early as 1973, we have learned corporate executives, had been informed of the benzene hazards.

For example, Exxon's research director, Dr. Robert Eckhardt, warned four years ago: "The accumulation in the literature of cases . . . leads to the inevitable conclusion that benzene is a leukemogenic agent . . . More recent observations seem to establish this association beyond a doubt."

A more recent study, commissioned by the American Petroleum Institute itself, found that benzene is a cancer-causing substance. In a private letter now in our possession, the institute listed the study's most important conclusion: "Occupational exposure to benzene appears causally related to myelongeous leukemia and its acute variants."

In nonmedical terms, the oil industry's doctors found that overexposure to benzene can cause death by leukemia. Those 150,000 endangered workers would be better off, therefore, if the industry put the emphasis on its medical findings rather than its lobbying claims.

As a simple precaution, the Labor Dept. wants plants to monitor the benzene level and give medical tests to the employees. The order also calls for new technology to lower the benzene exposure.

All of this, the oil tycoons lament, is going to cost money. Responded an angry government official: "It is unconscionable that the companies continue to fight this. They knew a benzene standard was coming to protect workers. The law can't be written to guard health and safety only if there is no cost to industry. We can't have that kind of trade-off in a civilized society."

Yet the corporate persuaders are now trying to convince the government that benzene is hazardous only at high levels, that the current standards offer workers all the protection they need, that the new standards would increase the price of benzene and that it is technologically impossible to lower the benzene levels anyway.

Unfortunately for the oil barons, these claims also conflict with their own research. Exxon's Dr. Eckhardt reported, for example, that his company several years ago began "eliminating exposures wherever possible and reducing them to the lowest possible level where elimination cannot be accomplished."

Government officials insist there is no need for any of the 150,000 workers to die of leukemia.

Footnote: U.S. plants last year produced an incredible 11 billion pounds of benzene, which is used in a variety of products from aspirin to pesticide. During the manufacturing process, millions of pounds of benzene are sprayed into the atmosphere. The Environmental Protection Agency has already labeled benzene a hazardous air pollutant. It is now investigating the benzene hazard from retail gasoline pumps. Benzene exposure may be labeled a hazard to the public outside the plants as well as the workers inside.

South resists unions

The sun belt — the South and Southwest — is booming.

Industry is moving thataway in its thirst for more water and its hunger for more workers willing to work.

And industry in the South, for the most part, is "staying ahead of the unions."

Unions boast an increasing number of union members North and South.

But percentagewise, the unions are slipping.

Nationally, 28 percent of all workers were unionized in 1970.

By 1974, the last year for which figures are available, only 26.2 percent were union members.

And in the South the percentage declined from 15.5 percent to 13.9 percent.

Unions have added some significant Southern industries in recent years — Farah Manufacturing, a G.M. plant in Louisiana, J.P. Stevens.

But wherever the question was put to a vote in Southern factories last year the unions were successful in only 44 percent of those elections.

The recent recession was a major deterrent to union organizing. With increased unemployment, fewer employees wanted to risk their bird-in-the-hand job.

Also, financially pinched unions were able to field fewer organizers. The Auto Workers region five has four organizers today where it had 11 in 1970.

Unions in the South are frequently "voted out," also.

A union unable to negotiate an attractive contract may be decertified by the workers. Nationally there were 611 such attempts in 1976. And in more than half of those, 54 percent, the unions lost.

Recently an organizer for the Machinists and Aerospace Workers told the Wall Street Journal that he had tried 10 times — seven different companies in northeast Arkansas — to persuade workers to join his union. He was successful in only three of the 10.

Unions had counted heavily on President Carter to give them a boost in the stubborn South. He had promised to support Common-Situs picketing and he had promised to oppose right-to-work laws.

But Congress sidetracked both of these — much to the relief of the White House — but to the utter dismay of Big Labor.

Meanwhile, wages in the South have been increasing, at least partly due to union pressures.

The average hourly wage in Arkansas last December was $4.11 an hour — about 76 percent of the national average.

And there are fringe benefits to working in the uncongested South and Southwest which are incalculable from a contract point of view.

Generally, the cost of living is lower, the outdoors is more accessible and commuting time and cost are minimal.

Much of the anti-union bias in the South relates to the fact that most native workers there were farm-bred, tend to be industrious and independent.

One Labor Department official guesstimates that this will not change for five years — or maybe 10 — or maybe 20.

Doc Peirsol

Just in jest

Latest official count shows there are 17,500 shopping centers and malls in the United States as compared with only 100 in 1950. However, just to keep the record straight, that 17,500 figure should be changed to 17,499¾ now that we are in the process of demolishing a portion of Pomona's downtown mall. — Somehow it's a bit hard to believe. Why it seems like only yesterday that city officials and businessmen from all over the United States were flocking to Pomona to study and take home pointers on our revolutionary new departure in central city business rehabilitation. And now . . . oh well, as the old Romans used to say: "Sic transit gloria mundi." Or to put it another way:

"The worldy hope men set their hearts upon
"Turns ashes — or it prospers; and anon
"Like snow upon the desert's dusty face
"Lighting a little hour or two — is gone."

Ann Landers

It's later than you think

Dear Ann Landers: In a recent column you said 95 per cent of men under 60 who are sexually impotent have nothing physically wrong. It's all mental.

Have you considered the possibility that women have caused the problem? So many females today want to be "independent." They resent it when a man offers a seat on the bus. ("I'm not crippled," I heard one woman say.) They don't want a man to protect them. ("I can take care of myself.")

These days females want to be lumberjacks (Jills?). They think they can do everything a man can do — and better. Agreed they should have equal opportunities, but women are NOT men and they should acknowledge the difference without feeling inferior.

Don't laugh this off. It happened to me and ruined my marriage. I wonder how many other marriages suffered the same fate. Care to comment? — California "Pig"

Dear Cal: At the risk of sounding like a traitor to my sex I will say I'm in your corner. And a crowded corner it is. We have lots of company, so cheer up, Bub.

Dear Ann: One of the most valuable aspects of your column is that it allows people to learn from the mistakes of others. That's that this letter is all about. I address my remarks to Lou — the woman who couldn't forgive her terminally-ill mother for having had an affair with her husband.

My own mother was a lot less than she should have been. She did not have a terminal illness — she died suddenly before I could bring myself to forgive her. It has been 30 years now and not a day goes by but that I don't regret it.

My mother had to die with her sins, but I must live with my lack of compassion and the knowledge that I set myself up as her judge.

So, I hope Lou sees this and does what she should do before it is too late. She will like herself better and hold her head a little higher. How can we ask God to forgive our sins when we refuse to forgive the sins of others? — One Who Knows

Dear One: You've said it all. I can add nothing but the hope that all the Lous in this world will take your advice. It's the way to go.

Dear Ann Landers: Thank you for telling the world through your column about Parents Anonymous, the organization for mothers and fathers who are afraid they will hurt their kids physically.

I'd like to add my personal thanks to Parents Anonymous. I was an abusive parent. I joined Parents Anonymous just in time. It helped me love and understand myself and it may have saved my child's life.

Now we have moved again, this time to Stamford, Conn. I learned there is a Parents Anonymous chapter here. The toll-free number in Connecticut is 1-800-842-2288.

I hope others with my problem will join. It could make a big difference in their lives. I thank God every night for Parents Anonymous. — A Lucky Mother

CONFIDENTIAL to I'd Rather Stay Home: Don't knock ignorance. At least 90 per cent of the conversation you hear at cocktail parties is based on it. If you'd rather stay home, why don't you?

Ann Landers discusses teenage drinking — its mythis, its realities. Learn the facts by reading "Booze and You — For Teen-Agers Only" by Ann Landers. Send 50 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Ill. 60611.

Dr. Miller

Keeping dog cool in hot weather

DEAR DR. MILLER: Why is it some dogs are bothered so much more by the heat than others? Our Cinnamon hardly moves on a hot day. She just lies around in the shade, panting and drinking water. — H.C.

DEAR H.C.: Cinnamon cools it as best a canine can: Plenty of water to replace that lost during the panting process, keeping out of the blazing direct sun, and minimizing exercise which quickly sends internal body temperatures soaring. On a critically hot day you can soak her to the skin, though cooling by evaporation is less effective for a dog than for a person. Breeds which handle heat best have a light, short coat, are lean and have a clear, unobstructed airway so they can transfer the maximum amount of air from the lungs with the minimum effort.

Long-haired, heavy-coated dogs should seldom be clim clipped completely, but thinning the coat can help reduce its heat-holding properties. Little can be done for those breeds with shortened noses and narrowed throats (boxers and bulldogs to pekes and pugs), except to be aware they do have breathing difficulties and to be sure they have all the help you can provide in keeping them calm, quiet, and cool during the long hot summer.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Nugget, my goldfish, has been getting fat lately. Fatter and fatter. She doesn't act very happy about it. She's so fat now her scales are kind of sticking out away from her body. Mother says she shouldn't be pregnant because she's not very big yet and she's the only goldfish I have, anyway. What do you think? — N.C.

DEAR N.C.: Your mother's right. Chances are slim plump Nugget's pregnant. More likely, she's sick. From your description, she's probably suffering from dropsy, an accumulation of fluid in the abdomen. There can be several causes for such a condition. Malnutrition may affect the liver and result in dropsy. Bacterial infections can damage internal organs, such as the kidneys, and cause this kind of fluid accumulation. Some cases of dropsy in goldfish can be cured if the fish is presented for treatment soon enough.

Charge of the light brigade

What is faster than a speeding bullet? More powerful than a locomotive? Able to leap tall buildings in a single jump?

Women at garage sales, that's who.

I had to see Garage Power firsthand to believe it. Before moving out of state, I found myself with a few excess trinkets. (Who am I kidding? The attic is so full of junk the county couldn't get the door open to condemn it.)

My girl friend, Esther, said, "You are a natural for a garage sale."

"Why do you say that?" I asked.

"Because you are cheap."

"I don't think you understand," I sniffed, "that spreading one's personal wares out in a garage for public exhibition is not only crass, it smacks of being tacky."

"I made 32 bucks off of my junk," she said.

"Why didn't you say so?" I asked excitedly. "Get the card table and let's get started."

The garage sale began at 9 a.m. By 7:30 a.m., I had 15 cars parked on the driveway, 18 on the lawn, two in a ditch and a Volkswagen trying to parallel park between two andirons in my living room.

They grabbed and bought anything that wasn't pumping water, cemented in the ground, growing from seed or spit sparks at them when touched.

They bought cocktail toothpicks that were billed as "Like New" . . . radios guaranteed not to play ever . . . plastic flowers that had died . . . toothless rakes . . . buckets with leaks . . . books of German military commands . . . and a ukulele that only knew one song, "The World Is Waiting For The Sunrise."

At one point I tried to shove through the crowd with a package in my hand. A woman grabbed it from me and said, "I'll give you 35 cents."

"No, really," I stammered. "This isn't . . ."

"Forty cents," she said, grabbing it, "and that is my last offer."

It is the first time anyone ever paid me 40 cents for my garbage.

By 4 p.m. I watched tiredly as a woman tried to coax my husband into her trunk.

"Esther," I said, "this is the most incredible sight I have ever seen."

"What's in that package under your arm?" she said.

"It's nothing," I hesitated.

"It's mildewed laundry," she shouted. "How much did you pay for it?"

"Thirty-five cents, but some of it still fits."

Dr. Lamb

Coping with angina pectoris

DEAR DR. LAMB — I went to my family doctor with chest pains and he took a cardiogram and said I have angina, pectoris. Will you explain what this is? I was off work for five weeks and when I returned and exert myself the symptoms are still there. After I rest for a while they disappear. Is this angina pectoris a permanent heart disease or could a person overcome this?

I've had a high cholesterol and fat lipids but have been on a low fat diet for several years. Has this anything to do with this disease? Also, I cannot breathe cold air. When I first had this we still had cold weather and when I was outside in brisk air my throat seemed to constrict and cut off my breathing. I've had to wear a mask so I could go out in the cold.

What can I do to overcome this angina pectoris, if anything? I am 49 and too young to be tied down. I have been an active person all my life and can't get used to the idea that I can't do everything I would like to do.

DEAR READER — Strictly speaking, angina pectoris means strangulation of the breastbone — describing the sensation that many people have with the dull oppressive pain in the center of the chest.

It is caused by inadequate blood flow to the heart muscle. The blood flow is usually restricted because of a buildup of fatty-cholesterol deposits in the arteries to the heart muscle. These are often associated with a high blood cholesterol level or high levels of other blood fats and with high blood pressure.

The pain occurs when you exert yourself because that is when your heart has to increase its workload. At rest you have enough blood flow through those clogged arteries to nourish your heart muscle and supply oxygen. When the oxygen demands go up requiring an increase in circulation this just is not possible. Hence, you get pain when you exert too much and the pain goes away when you rest.

I am sending you The Health Letter number 2-10, Heart Attack, Myocardial Infarction, Angina Pectoris, to give you a more complete understanding of your problem. These disorders resulting from fatty-cholesterol deposits are the most common cause of death in our population. Others who want this information can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it.

The condition usually persists until you either decrease the work of the heart or there is some improvement in circulation to the heart muscle. The latter is not always possible. We do have small blood vessels in the heart muscle that will open and help some.

You can help by decreasing the work of the heart. That is best done through eliminating any extra body fat you have. The less you weigh the easier it will be for you to walk and not exert yourself.

Cold weather is known to trigger angina attacks. Walking into a cold wind is particularly bad. Patients with heart disease should bundle up properly and protect the chest and throat area in cold weather. It is a reflex mechanism. The cold air going into the lungs can also trigger the attack.

If your blood pressure is high, lowering it, and loss of fat helps to do that, will also decrease the attacks.

Dr. Lamb answers representative letters of general interest in his column. Write to him in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

All kinds of kissing types

Item No. 914A in our Love and War man's file on kisses lists same as to type. Edited down, it merely says there are kisses that love, kisses that soothe, kisses that thrill, kisses that amuse, kisses that pay homage and plain duty kisses. Be sure to use the right kiss at the right time. Substitute that thrill kiss for the pay-homage kiss and you could be in real trouble.

Our Language man would like to point out that "hors d'oeuvre" freely translated means "outside the main works."

PATRIOTIC BUOY

Q. "Is it true there's a red, white and blue buoy moored in Baltimore harbor to mark the spot where Francis Scott Key wrote 'The Star-Bangled Banner'?"

A. Not anymore. It was only there for a couple of months in the fall of 1914.

Rudyard Kipling once expressed the notion that nearly every man has one place above all others where he'd like to retire. His choice was Sussex, England. Personally, think I'd prefer Dominion Terrace at Sequim on the Olympic Peninsula in Washington State. Sequim is the sunshine spot thereabouts. Some sort of configuration in the Olympic Mountains protects it from the rainfall which annually increases one inch per mile going both east and west from that bright town.

FAMILY FIGHTS

Two things in particular tend to make a man or woman furious. One, to be reminded of a weakness said party already knows exists. And two, to be downgraded in some real ability about which said party's secretly proud. Marriage counselors say more than a third of all family fights start when husbands or wives commit these offenses against their matrimonial mates.

Possibly the most intriguing press conference of an older generation was held by that renowned striptease artist Gypsy Rose Lee. In Milwaukee, it was. Wearing a high-neckline dress with long sleeves, she walked into a roomful of reporters, and as she offered her introductory remarks, she slowly unbuttoned three buttons at the wrist of each sleeve. That's all. Yet nobody there remembers what she said.. And nobody there has forgotten that little session, I'm told.

About 700 times as much solar energy falls on the United States annually as the amount of energy of any kind that the nation uses up.

What people say

"Things are going well. But it's hard to ignore Sartre's definition of nothingness and what's important. If I view my films or books just as diversions, then it's fine. But if I consider them as accomplishments, what do they all amount to? You die, the sun burns out, the universe expands and even Shakespeare and Beethoven are forgotten."

Counseling Corner

By R. CLIFF WATERS
Marriage and family counselor

I dropped in at a friend's house recently to ask for the loan of his lawnmower; mine had recently "come down with the flu." My friend works long hours and must often be away in the evenings. He makes a point of coming home early one afternoon a week to be with his children. I found him and his three boys all sitting around the kitchen table sharing a gallon of root beer. "Welcome to the gripe session," he said, smiling as I came in the door.

A busy father quite naturally worries about the limited time he has available for his children. The years when they are young and need him most are, unfortunately, the same years that a man is trying to establish himself in a business or profession. The financial demands of a growing family also weigh heavily on the father's shoulders and he may feel he needs a second job to supplement his regular income. No matter how great the demands on his time and energy, it is still possible for a busy father to be a good father.

As no doubt you are aware, the quantity of time you spend with your children is not as important as the quality of your relationship with them.

What activities can you discover that are enjoyable for both of you? For some fathers, this is sports; for others, craft work; and for still others, a quiet hobby such as coin collecting. You should find fun in what you do together, or the child will sense that you are forcing yourself and the value of companionship will be lost.

A warning for all the fathers who are starting late at this: Start easy. Do not plan to spend a large piece of time with your children the first few afternoons. Start with a limited amount of time and activity. Do not set large objectives to be accomplished. Both they and you want this time together. Both of you must get adjusted to this sharing of time . . . to the sharing of feelings and interests. Set limited goals and expectations. Be cool (patient) and resist the temptation to make up for all those lost opportunities.

Fathers are likely to spend more time with their sons than with their daughters, but whether he realizes it or not, the young girl is looking to him. He is extremely important to her.

Lee Hazen of New York, the general counsel of the ACBL and a player who has won 11 major championships, including four Vanderbilt Cups, is also responsible for some of the finest bridge stories.

Sitting West, he elected to open the nine of spades against South's rather normal three-notrump contract. The queen was played from dummy and East followed with the three spot.

A diamond was led and Lee took his ace. In spite of that discouraging three of spades, Lee saw no reason to try another suit. The game was match-points and Lee did not want to help declarer with any problems he might have in hearts and clubs.

He led his eight of spades. The ace was played from dummy and East played the six. Declarer cashed three diamonds while East chucked a couple of clubs. The king of clubs was led next and Lee was on lead once more. He led his last spade!

His partner started to play a card, jumped in shock, put the card back, produced the king of spades, cashed two more spade tricks and apologized to Lee for not seeing the king of spades earlier.

Lee said: "You sure found it at the right time."

Ask the Jacobys

A West Virginia reader wants to know if anyone has ever found a conventional meaning for an opening bid of five spades?

It has been used to show a hand such as:

♠QJ 10 9 8 7 6 5 ♥A ♦- ♦AKQJ.

Partner is supposed to bid six with the ace or king of trumps or seven with both, but to ignore high cards in other suits. The trouble with this convention is that after you wait 10 years to get the right hand your partner might forget it.

Renewed interest over an old treatment for breast cancer

EDITOR'S NOTE — Doctors at several medical centers are debating use of an old treatment for early breast cancer as an alternative to mastectomy. The treatment, external and internal radiation, is getting renewed attention because of emotionally charged debates over the need for breat removal.

By BRIAN SULLIVAN
AP Science Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — A treatment for early breast cancer, dating back some 50 years, is attracting renewed interest as an alternative to breast removal in a few medical centers in this country.

The treatment involves applying a beam of radiation to the breast, followed by implanting radioactive substances directly to the breast tumor.

In the implantation, either radium needles or seeds of iridium-192 in flexible plastic tubes are inserted into the breast.

But the use of radiation treatment remains controversial, with most physicians recommending some form of mastectomy, or removal of the breast. The latest report on the radiation treatment is from the Joint Center for Radiation Therapy at the Harvard Medical School, published in the latest issue of Cancer, the journal of the American Cancer Society.

"Few topics in medicine engender as much emotional response as the treatment of primary breast cancer," the Harvard team writes. "This appears true of both patient and physician alike.

The Harvard group says the intensity of the argument has prompted a reevaluation of methods for local control of breast cancer, and it has been encouraged by recent reports of the effectiveness of chemotherapy after treatment.

Radium implants fell into disuse because the large radium devices were painful to patients and exposed physicians to excess radiation.

"Radiation therapy without mastectomy," the Harvard researchers say, "is a local treatment which offers the potential for local control with a minimal functional or cosmetic impairment."

The words "local control" are a key to the different approaches. Dr. Samuel Hellman, director of the Harvard center, says that in many cases the cancer already has spread at the time of detection, so the form of treatment will not determine whether the patient is cured or not.

By local control, Dr. Hellman means the prevention of local recurrence of the tumor in the breast, regardless whether the cancer may spread elsewhere.

"It would ... seem that most patients who are to develop distant metastases have done so before clinical presentation and that local recurrence is primarily a local problem," Dr. Hellman has said.

"This problem can be serious and disturbing for patients, and its prevention is, of course, a desired end. It would be of considerable functional and cosmetic advantage to achieve local control without requiring mastectomy."

But at an institution such as Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center in New York, experts disagree with the radiation approach. Dr. Roy Ashikari, acting chief of the breast service, says such treatments as lump removal and radiation are inferior to surgical treatment in the long run.

Dr. Ashikari says that 75 per cent of the women with early breast cancer, and with no spread of the cancer to the lymph nodes under the armpit, can be alive — "cured" — at the end of 10 years. Even with evidence of spread to the nodes, he says, the cure rate is 40 per cent at 10 years.

At Sloan-Kettering, some 500 to 600 cases of breast cancer a year are treated, the largest number in the country, Dr. Ashikari says. And he argues that radiation treatment has no such long-term results yet. Use of radiation and radioactive implants, he says, can control local breast disease; but "there is a doubt" about cure.

Dr. Hellman says his results so far are comparable to those resulting from general surgical techniques, but he adds that it is still too early to evaluate long-term survival.

The use of external radiation and radioactive implants as an alternative to mastectomy is not new, Dr. Hellman notes. The first good scientific paper on the subject was published in 1937 in the British Medical Journal, covering nearly 10 years of experience. Now, in addition to the Harvard work, the treatment is being employed at such places as the M.D. Anderson Hospital and Tumor Institute in Houston, Yale University, Jefferson Medical College and Hahnemann Medical College, both in Philadelphia, and the University of Southern California-Los Angeles County Medical Center. The procedure is popular in Europe, especially in France.

Dr. Bernard Pierquin, of the Henri Mondor Hospital in Creteil, France, told a cancer symposium in San Francisco recently of his experience with 410 patients. Of these, 80 per cent had early stage breast cancer, and the five-year survival rate was 90 per cent. He said surgical treatment is associated with a comparable five-year survival.

Dr. Hellman's team reported reviewing 150 consecutive patients treated primarily by radiation at the Harvard center between July 1, 1968 and Dec. 31, 1974, and updated in telephone interviews.

Of 84 cancers in 80 patients with early breast cancer, termed Stage I and Stage II, local control was achieved in all but one case, Dr. Hellman said, for periods ranging from two years to eight years. But for women with more advanced cancers, Stage III, the treatment was less successful. Of 86 Stage III patients, there have been 28 local recurrences.

The external beam radiation consists of a total dosage from a linear accelerator of 5,000 rads, followed by implantation of the radioactive substances for two or three days. The implant allows direct dosage to the tumor and produces only a slight shrinkage of the breast, the Harvard team reported.

Homes use less energy

NEW YORK (AP) — Builders of energy-conserving homes report their houses are "selling well," according to a recent survey conducted by OwensCorning Fiberglas Corp.

Seven hundred energy-conserving home builders in 50 states were sampled and responses to a detailed questionnaire were received from 238 builders in 42 states, each of whom built an average of 37 homes a year.

Eighty-nine per cent of the respondents, whose energy-conserving homes were completed and had been on the market long enough to evaluate market acceptance, said their homes were "selling well."

The survey was initiated to determine the extent of energysaving construction activity around the country and to compile a profile of the construction techniques and applications used by builders.

Bicyclists swamp Iowa towns, empty eateries

ROCKFORD, Iowa (AP) — A horde rolls across Iowa in the late summer, engulfing towns and eating everything it can find.

"We were swamped," said Thelma Koch, Rockford city councilwoman. "They come in such a large group — thousands of them."

The horde is RAGBRAI-V. Translated: the Des Moines Register's Annual Great Bicycle Ride Across Iowa, the fifth such ride.

No one knows for sure how many persons are taking part in the ride, because no one is counting, said John Karras, one of the organizers.

Rockford was set upon by somewhere between 3,000 and 4,000 bicyclists making their way through 400 miles of back highways from Onawa on the Missouri River east to Lansing on the Mississippi. They started Monday and began pedaling into Lansing on Saturday.

"There's people in their 70s, young kids, and older ladies in their wide-brimmed hats," said Bob Jarboe, a photographer with the group. "It's incredible. The farmers put lawn chairs out in their fields and wave at them as they pedal by."

Friday night was spent in Decorah, where the riders found Luther College's doors wide open.

The fieldhouse was available for swimming and games. Overnight accommodations were available in dormitories and breakfast was served in the college dining hall Saturday morning.

The Woden Woman's Club called everyone in the phone book, asking them to bake cookies for the bikers. In Rockford, they sold 4,500 chocolate chip cookies.

In Ida Grove, the National Guard armory was opened for showers and east of Castana, Robert Hawthorne provided water.

"I've ridden a bike a lot of places and I know what it's like to be without water," he said.

One surprised couple was Dave Treinis, 22, of Spartanburg, S.C., and Erin Potter, 21, of Stockton, Calif. Pedaling into Iowa on a cross-country trip, they came across a patrolman at Highway 20 directing them to turn left.

They did, and suddenly were surrounded by thousands of other bikers.

"We've been in places where no one had even heard of people pedaling across the country," said Treinis. "We go to Iowa and suddenly we're part of a group. Weird."

At Titonka, population 599, Florence Reynolds' County Kitchen restaurant was emptied of eggs, bacon, hash browns and sausage Wednesday morning. "By 9:30 a.m. I'm going to switch to just beefburgers. I don't know what else to do," Mrs. Reynolds said.

"I wasn't prepared for this," she said. "I thought everyone was going to eat at the campgrounds."

Friday's first stop was Jericho, where the town's only tavern and a furniture refinishing store had coffee, rolls, and other delicacies set out on planks outdoors.

Institute paves road to diplomatic career

By FLORA LIEBICH

GENEVA (AP) — For many Third World diplomats, coming to Geneva to attend one of the hundreds of international conferences held here every year is like going to a class reunion.

Arab or Israeli, Iranian nobleman or African revolutionary, many of these politicians have at least one thing in common: they are alumni of the Graduate Institute of International Studies.

The institute, which has won admiration in developing countries, was founded in 1927. The Rockefeller Foundation and Swiss authorities were godfathers of the project, originally designed to train international civil servants for the Geneva-based League of Nations, the short-lived ancestor of the United Nations.

The institute's primary goal today, according to its Swiss director, Jacques Freymond, is to train able negotiators for the North-South, East-West dialogues that dominate the current international scene.

To some, the school has also become an answer of sorts to Patrice Lumumba University in Moscow and other communist campuses where aspiring members of the Third World elite are exposed to ideological indoctrination.

In 50 years, the institute has turned out some 4,000 diplomats, economists and international lawyers.

The institute operates in both French and English, and its international orientation is reflected in the composition of its faculty and student body, which includes West and East Europeans, North and South Americans, and, making up at least one-quarter of the enrollment, Africans and Asians.

The regular teaching staff, a cosmopolitan group of scientists and development experts, is regularly supplemented by guest lecturers.

Situated on a hill overlooking Lake Geneva, the stately pink villa which houses the institute has a deceiving ivory tower appearance. Three modern pavilions set in the surrounding park house a small number of students for a nominal fee. Until recently segregation was the custom, but this year the dormitories have begun to go coed.

The economic resources of the students are as varied as their national backgrounds. Flashy sports cars and rusting bicycles stand side by side in the institute's parking lot, and student attire ranges from sweatshirts to Christian Dior originals.

An African student who may aspire to his country's highest office will have to think twice before buying himself a $2 meal at a cheap bistro. But the story is also told of the young Iranian who lived for two years in a luxury hotel before settling in an ultra-chic residential area.

For most students, time spent at the institute is not only a passport to a career but is also an experience in international relations at the personal level.

As one Ivory Coast student put it, "The first lesson we learn at the institute is to leave all our prejudices in the locker-room. We manage to bypass emotionally-keyed differences and get involved, instead, in really worthwhile discussions.

"We don't let events in the outside world influence our behavior although what most of us are studying, in fact, is that very outside world. But how else could Arab students study with an Israeli professor and vice versa?"

Recently, vague echoes of student discontent have been heard at the institute. The student association wants greater participation at the administrative level and is complaining about the length of the doctoral program, which usually lasts six years. They are also concerned about the high dropout rate.

"For many of the Third World students, simply a year or two spent at the institute is thought enough to land them a job of prime minister when they return home," a Canadian student observed.

Edible flower

The artichoke is really a large flower bud, covered with thick leaflike green petals. If unpicked, the artichoke will bloom into a big blue flower. A ripe specimen can be the size of a football. Artichokes are customarily eaten after being boiled. After the 50 or so petals are dispatched, the diner encounters the bud's large meaty base, — the heart or core.

proves of the doctor's charges. Since Medicare does not recognize or approve the entire amount billed in many cases, the patient's bills must total about $100 before he is entitled to any refund.

For patients who are covered by Medi-Cal without Medicare, the physician received only what Medi-Cal approves.

"For those patients who are on both Medicare and Medi-Cal, the doctor cannot bill the patient for any part of the sum due which has not been paid by the agencies," related Dr. Gill.

Dr. Gill says that, in addition to the inadequate reimbursements, his payments from the agencies are erroneous about 10 to 20 per cent of the time.

He says he is now spending more time trying to correct his billing payments from Blue Shield, which is the payment agency for patients on combined Medicare-Medi-Cal program or covered by Medi-Cal alone, than he is in providing professional care to his patients.

Problems also arise with claims for Medicare coverage, only, which are processed by Occidental Life Insurance Co., and for certain group coverages by other insurance carriers, he said.

Dr. Gill says he has written Blue Shield 163 letters of protest in the past year over erroneous billings.

"Of the 163 letters, it took 76 letters to correct the claims for 48 patients. My pleas, in 16 letters, were denied for 14 patients.

"I now have written 71 letters regarding 55 patients and these cases are still pending," continues Dr. Gill.

"The fact that so many cases are finally corrected proves I was right in the first place," continues the doctor. He adds that this constant re-billing adds again to the cost of operating a practice for the physician.

Other doctors and health care providers in the valley also report problems with reimbursements to varying degrees but decline to be quoted.

A spokesman from Blue Shield in Los Angeles admitted that there are often billing problems and that some physicians who serve patients in convalescent hospitals are faced with additional burdens.

"Like anything with the government, the entire program is very complicated," explained the spokesman.

"We are under the direction of officials in Washington, D.C., and Sacramento and not free to make our own decisions.

"Reimbursements are strictly limited and the doctors who sees patients in convalescent hospitals are paid on a special, very restrictive schedule."

The spokesman said Blue Shield staff members do try to work with the doctors to settle claims, even to the point of visiting offices to discuss problems.

"We sympathize with the doctors, but must follow rules and be sure it's our responsibility before paying any claim," added the spokesman.

Dr. Gill, who served as a physician in the Army Medical Corps during World War II, says he's dedicated to his profession and has every intention of continuing to serve the valley.

But, he adds, the public needs to be made aware of what the state and federal medical programs are costing them in both taxes and increased charges.

For new Puente Hills office

Bank ceremonies slated

Civic and business leaders will join officials of The Sumitomo Bank of California at the Hacienda Shopping Center Monday at 11 a.m. to break ground on the site of the bank's 25th branch office. It is scheduled to open for business in December, 1977, and will be known as the Puente Hills office.

During the groundbreaking program, a traditional Japanese religious ceremony will be staged by Buddhist priests to purify the ground and to seek the blessing of Buddha for the prospering of the new office.

Welcoming bank officials to the area on Monday will be the mayor Gerald Singer of La Puente; Arthur Thomas, president of the Industry Manufacturers Council, City of Industry; Charles Gray, president of the Industry Manufacturers Council, City of Industry; Charles Gray, president of the Greater La Puente Valley Chamber of Commerce; and Tom Fujii, president of the East San Gabriel Valley Japanese Community Center in West Covina.

Representing the bank, the 10th largest financial institution in the state, will be Kazuo Hatano, of Osaka, Japan, chairman and chief executive officer, from San Francisco; and Nimei Akamatsu, execitive vice president, from Los Angeles.

He's never regretted it, he says. His retirement has brought him "a lot of pleasure."

With his wife, Eleanor, Asmus moved to California from Chicago, Ill., in 1940. They have one son, John, who was graduated from Chaffey High School in 1954, and later earned a Ph.D. in electrical engineering and physics from Cal Tech. He now holds a chair at UC San Diego and is doing basic research in laser and sonar.

John headed projects in Italy cleaning art objects with the laser beam. He recently headed a project in Florence to find a lost Divinci mural.

The Asmus have two granddaughters.

Asmus is a joiner. He is a member of the board of the General Dynamics Pomona Management Club, a member of the Chicago Physics Club and a regional director and San Diego Chapter chairman of the American Society of Tool Engineers.

He is a master Mason in Pomona's Compass Lodge, vice president of General Dynamics Retirees, vice president of General Dynamics Rockhounds, a member of the American Association of Retired People, the National Rifle Association and the Orchid Society of San Bernardino County.

He travels. Some of his orchid plants were given him by friends in Hawaii. Some of his handmade jewelry is worn by friends and relatives as far away as Japan and Germany.

Asmus also writes.

His article entitled "Buying Emeralds in Colombia" appears in the March 1976 copy of the "Lapidary Journal."

Camels were scattered

Camels once populated all continents except Australia. Today there is only the one-humped or dromedary, used for riding and the two-humped bactrian, used as a beast of burden. The South American llama, alpaca, guanaco and vicuna are close relatives.

Horse owners planning outing

Horse owners from throughout Southern California are planning a five-day 120-mile trail ride from the mountains to the sea, according to a spokesman for the Tri-county Santa Ana River Trail Ride Association.

Gale Harmon, who directed a similar ride along the length of the Santa Ana River in 1970, reported to San Bernardino County Supervisors this week that riders will gather at the headwaters of the Santa Ana River high in the San Bernardino Mountains Thursday, Sept. 1, for the journey down the mountains and across San Bernardino, Riverside and Orange counties to the Pacific Ocean.

The ride is sponsored by the California Horsemen's Association.

Reservations for the ride are being accepted until Monday, according to ride sponsors.

For more information, persons may contact the San Bernardino County Regional Parks Department, 383-1912, the Riverside County Parks Department, 787-2551, or the Orange County Parks Department, 834-3070.

Homeowners to confront city council

For the second consecutive week homeowners in both Pomona and Claremont are expected to confront Pomona City Council members Monday night seeking rejection of a proposed apartment complex above Foothill Boulevard.

Last week the council, with one member absent, found itself evenly split on the issue — two members voting for the project and two against.

The decisive vote is to be cast this week by Councilwoman Georgia Grove, who was on vacation at the time of the first public hearing.

At issue is a proposed 36-unit apartment house on vacant property on the east side of Sumner Avenue just behind the new Bob's Big Boy Restaurant on Foothill.

Homeowners in the neighborhoods to the north fear an apartment house would bring congestion, crime and lowered property values.

Other agenda items for the 8 p.m. meeting include a hearing on the city's proposed conflict-of-interest code for commissioners, and another presentation by city workers who are protesting the course of wage negotiations.

Neon reminder glows in the distance

City camping: outdoor trip a 'retreat' toward nature

EDITOR'S NOTE: There's Ranger Paul of the National Parks Service. The campfire and pup tents, chow from a stew pot, ghost stories and giggles. All the trappings of kids camping out in the 26,000-acre Gateway National Recreation Area. But a neon sign in the distance is a glowing reminder that they haven't even left Brooklyn and are only a few miles from home.

BROOKLYN, N.Y. (AP) — We're tenting tonight on the old camp ground — camp ground in the largest of the five boroughs of the nation's largest city. Were it a city alone, which it was until Jan. 1, 1898, it would be America's fourth largest.

Brooklyn is hardly the place for a rural retreat. It is, in fact, a city still, with its own special past and present. The Dodgers are gone, but Ebbets Field is not forgotten. There are the Ebbets Field apartments. The Brooklyn Eagle — a newspaper Walt Whitman edited — is gone too, but more than a dozen weekly papers serve the disparate neighborhoods. And the Brooklyn Bridge is ever present and ever lovely.

Some say the borough even has its own language — spoken most eloquently by the Kid from Brooklyn, the inevitable character in World War II movies who spoke "poils" of cynical city wisdom but sacrificed for his buddies in the end.

Today Brooklyn's nearly 2½ million citizens live in stately brownstones, decaying tenements, apartments and homes old and new, large and small. The city is a tangle of streets, stores, parks, wharves and warehouses, so confusingly vast that Thomas Wolfe once wrote a story about it called "Only the Dead Know Brooklyn."

Indeed, hardly the place for a rural retreat.

It's just that, though, for two dozen of Paulette Eisenstadt's first graders from P.S. 8, kids from Brooklyn not used to telling stories around a campfire, picking wild berries or romping amid tall, seaside grass.

The youngsters set out with their teacher and a dozen parents from their school near the Brooklyn Bridge, which spans the East River to lower Manhattan and just a coin's toss from Wall Street. There many of the neighborhood daddies work.

"Catherine and Daddy ... Jenny and Mommy," the roll is called before the yellow school bus begins its trek across Brooklyn along Flatbush Avenue.

The bus goes past the Williamsburg Savings Bank (Brooklyn's tallest building but at 512 feet a country cousin to Manhattan's 1,353-foot World Trade Center), past Prospect Park, past the parlor of a fortune-teller whose sign identifies her as "Sister Rice, Indian Reader," past the Unique Boutique — which is anything but unique on an avenue lined with clothing shops, bakeries, delicatessens and other small businesses.

Near the end of the avenue, the children get their last look at civilization as they know it, the Kings Plaza shopping center.

There the bus turns into the Gateway National Recreation Area which, had it not been set aside as old Floyd Bennett airfield 40 years ago, would have been only a mirror of all they had just passed.

Magically, it isn't. On the very first hike from National Park Service building to campsite, birds are nesting, toads are hopping, rabbits scampering.

Children run a few steps ahead, lie in the thigh-high grass and disappear, giggling, from parents' eyes.

Then there are the tents lent by the Park Service and set up with the instruction and sometimes the aid of Ranger Paul. There is Ranger Paul himself, young, patient, slow-talking, the perfect forest ranger in his brown uniform and Canadian Mountie hat.

Ranger Paul replies to a question that his last name is Gates, he is 21, from Franklin, Vt., a student on the work end of a work-study program in law enforcement at Boston's Northeastern University. He declines a glass of wine but accepts two helpings of Mrs. Eisenstadt's stew, brought from home in a pot big enough to feed all.

After supper, there is running, games, wandering, wrestling, falling down, lying in the grass looking up at stars much brighter than the ones seen from lamp-lit city streets.

Then Paul builds a campfire, children and parents sing and roast marshmallows, and Paul tells ghost stories. One is about Charlie, who haunts youngsters who wander away from camp.

Then, into the tents and into bed. Lying in a sleeping bag, cuddling a stuffed animal, giggling with a best friend. Then, out of the tents. Running to giggle in another tent with another best friend.

Seven-year-old Mary emerges from her tent to ask Daddy, "When are the boys going to scare us?"

They do, becoming shadowy monsters, looming over pup tents with flashlights shining behind them. The girls dutifully shriek.

Around midnight, mercifully, it really is bedtime. Parents now talk about kids, apartments and houses, bills, jobs.

It is peaceful in the country. Country? Not really; it's Brooklyn, remember. One parent looks into the night and asks, "Did anyone bring his Alexander's charge card?" Everyone looks. In the distance is the neon sign of Alexander's department store at Kings Plaza.

Brooklyn is still all around. Gateway's 26,000 acres, which also include parts of New Jersey and the boroughs of Queens and Staten Island, were set aside by Congress as an open place for city folks only five years ago. Floyd Bennett field, 1,050 of those acres, was transferred from the Navy to the Interior Department two years ago.

At 5 a.m., sleep is ended by other reminders of aviation and of Floyd Bennett, the aviator who was with Admiral Byrd on the first flight over the North Pole in 1926. Jetliners roar overhead from nearby Kennedy and LaGuardia airports. Children wander hand-in-hand to portable potties. There is breakfast of fruit and cereal, and Ranger Paul reappears.

Next, the ranger leads a hike to Jamaica Bay. There are birds and toads, wild flowers and wild berries. Coming back, berry-stained hands clutch carefully collected flowers.

The campout ends quickly now. Lunch is bologna and salami with Mrs. Eisenstadt's home-made bread. Tents come down. Gear is packed. The yellow school bus arrives for its cargo of weary children.

It begins the journey home.

Gold mining in Alaska on the upswing again

FAIRBANKS, Alaska (AP) — After a long slide that took production to a low of 7,107 troy ounces in 1973, gold mining in Alaska is on the upswing.

Production went up to 9,146 ounces in 1974, to 14,980 ounces in 1975 and to 17,660 ounces last year.

And state assayer Don Stein says prospects for mining gold in Alaska will always be good, "because the gold is here."

A fixed price of $35 an ounce all but nailed the lid on gold mining in the state, but interest picked up soon after Congress freed the price of gold in 1968.

"At $35 an ounce, the Alaska gold miner could barely operate unless he had a pretty good placer mine," Stein says.

"When the price went up, a lot more operations came into being, because you could mine lower grade claims."

Many of those new operations represented so-called "weekend prospectors" who turned to full-time mining with an improved price picture.

"It made it worthwhile for them to work their properties on a full-time basis," Stein said.

Stein said recent sales of gold by the International Monetary Fund have acted as a buffer on the price of gold, but that it still remains extremely strong.

Another factor affecting gold mining in Alaska is inflation, but Stein sees that as a two-edged sword.

On the one hand, inflation cuts into the ability of miners to work lower grade deposits, he said.

"However, with increasing inflation conditions, you're going to find that pressure is on the price of gold to go up," says Stein.

Other upward pressures on gold prices come from new and increased industrial uses of the metal.

For instance, because it is an excellent conductor of electricity, gold is now a key ingredient in the manufacture of equipment such as computers, Stein said.

Most of the gold operations in Alaska are family-type undertakings, or partnerships of two or three men, Stein said. But two dredges were working near Nome last summer, and they will be back in operation this year.

Alaska Gold Co. used the two dredges to recover 14,320 of the 17,660 troy ounces of gold produced in the state last year, moving 1,194,620 cubic yards of gravel in the process.

Another dredge is working on a platinum property at Goodnews Bay, and it is producing some gold as a side product, Stein said.

"Hard-rock mining in Alaska is practically non-existent, except for the Little Squaw Mining Co. property at Chandalar," Stein said.

He said Little Squaw is producing this summer with a 100-ton-a-day mill the Spokane, Wash., firm has constructed at the mine site on the south slope of the Brooks Range.

"That's the one thing that is going to be good in Alaska in the future, hard-rock gold mining," Stein predicted. "We've got large low-grade gold deposits in Alaska that have yet to be discovered."

He was also optimistic about the future discovery of placer deposits in the state — "There are a lot of creeks that have never been prospected."

But Stein has a word of caution for those who might believe that gold in Alaska is an easy quarry.

"It takes experience, work and patience," he said. "By the law of averages, if you take 40 miners, prospecting all of their lives, only one will find a really valuable property."

Develops new coffee plant

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — A Brazilian microbiologist believes he has discovered the better coffee plant. But he's not quite sure yet.

"We don't know what we will get, except a different plant," said Maro Sondahl, who has been doing research on ways to grow coffee plants whose beans can withstand Brazilian frosts.

Hissing tire really snake

DUNDALK, Md. (AP) — Brian Berkeridge was not worried about that hissing he heard coming from the front of his car. He thought it was just a leaky tire.

But as Berkeridge pulled into a car wash here, a state police trooper spotted a five-foot boa constrictor gliding out of the grill of the car.

Trooper James Emerick and Cpl. Francis France used a stick to prod the snake into a garbage can. The hissing snake was taken to the local state police barracks to await word from its owner.

Solon, 75, casts vote for jogging

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — On a humid summer morning, Strom Thurmond, 75, loped down the street from his home in a quiet Columbia neighborhood.

"There's really no excuse for people who say they can't get exercise," he said, outpacing a reporter struggling at his side, or perhaps a few steps behind.

At a time of year when the temperature is enough to keep even avid joggers indoors, the state's senior U.S. senator often dons a pair of red shorts and a "Run for Fun" T-shirt and jogs at a brisk pace during the day's coolest hours.

Jogging has grown in popularity with millions of Americans in recent years. But Thurmond is no newcomer to the sport.

A former athletic coach, Thurmond has been jogging for half a century, beginning when he ran in the three-mile and two-mile track and cross country events at Clemson University in the 1920s.

These days he has less competitive — but more enjoyable — company; his children, J. Strom Jr., 4, and Julianna Gertrude, 3.

The senator's routine calls for jogging about 2 to 2½ miles on weekdays and three to four miles on weekends.

He has become a familiar figure to residents of Waccamaw Avenue in Columbia, where he recently moved his family in preparation for his 1978 re-election campaign in South Carolina.

He also runs near his McLean, Va., residence while in Washington.

Thurmond has attended several events to encourage other Americans to jog.

Most of the Thurmond family jogs, including the senator's wife, Nancy, 30, and their oldest child, 6-year-old Nancy Moore Thurmond. The Thurmonds also play tennis and enjoy bicycling, but the senator says jogging takes the least time and he runs even when he is traveling.

"I just pack some shorts and shoes," he says. "Running, I think, is one of the finest exercises that one can participate in. Jogging is something that you can keep up for the rest of your life, if you want to do it."

Then he added, "Of course, you have to do it with discretion."

The daily routine includes about 20 minutes of calisthenics, lifting weights for about five minutes and 20 to 25 minutes of jogging.

The benefits of exercise have been witnessed in his career. "When a lot of people — a lot of people who are younger than I am — seem to tire, I don't tire very much," Thurmond says.

Polly Bergen's dilemma

Coping with sly voices of insecurity

By ELLIE GROSSMAN

NEW YORK (NEA) — It's a sly, insidious voice and to Polly Bergen, who's been plagued by it, it sounds like a whisper.

"What are those people going to say about me?" That's how it sounds, she whispers across a conference table at Wyden Publishers.

"It's that lack of belief in themselves that created the need for a book like this," she says, full-toned.

Her book is "I'd Love To, But What'll I Wear?" a sartorial guide to funerals, weddings, hospital visits, vacations (hot and cold), seductions (yours and his), even a down-home dinner at the Carters'.

Ms. Bergen used to worry a lot about what to wear which is why she's worked so hard to learn what's called for. Everywhere.

In fact, that sly voice of insecurity has been whispering to her since she was a child growing up alone and not understanding why.

"My father was a construction engineer and we never stayed in a town more than three months at a time. But, you think you're to blame for not having friends and you start to panic. Then, because you don't know how to make friends, you try too hard and fail and become more and more insecure."

But a performer isn't alone, not with all those people out there making a noise of love.

"When I was young, the most important thing in the world was to have people applaud and, by doing that, say they loved me," she says. "But the more I arrived at a point where I felt okay as a person without them telling me, the less I needed it."

So eventually, Emmy-winner Polly Bergen, whose album "Bergen Sings Morgan" is a classic, stopped acting and singing. What she wanted to do was prove she could make a success of her little cosmetic company, Oil of the Turtle.

Eventually, though, she sold the company and then in '74, wrote her first book, "Polly's Principles." Then on to another venture, another project — briskly, energetically, the way she moves and speaks. Perhaps impulsively.

"You know," she says, "I watched the Tony Awards on television and most of the people on the show were highly respected, older than I am, and I sat there saying, why am I not doing this? Why can't I be a wonderful star of the theater and films? Why did I choose to leave that to learn something else, and then something else? And I really don't know."

But she does know, almost for sure, that she dresses from personal choice, not trends. Today, for instance, it is a red pantsuit, black shirt and perhaps more jewelry than she recommends for any occasion in the book.

"Still, it wouldn't be true to say what people say about me doesn't matter," she says, "because it does. But I don't live my life for it and at one time I did."

That stopped, she says, after her second marriage broke up. "I'd been married for 20 years, I was 41, and I literally felt my life was over. As enlightened and independent as I thought I was, I realized I was totally dependent on a man and his opinion of me.

"If he thought I was bright and sexy and a good mother, I was. And when that mirror disappeared, I was devastated. I felt I was too old and ugly for anyone to ever want me again, and I had a terrible fear of ending up in one room over a drugstore selling cosmetics. None of these were legitimate fears but reality has nothing to do with what you feel."

She's a survivor, though, who goes behind closed doors to recoup, then comes out "to do what I have to do."

But then we all have things to do, even when it comes to clothes. Every woman should have her own style, she says in the book — Ms. Bergen's is clear, bright colors and nothing hard-edged — but you must wear the right thing to the Russian Embassy (no decollete) or to the office (no decollete) or wherever.

"Well," she says, "I realize I say 'don't mind what people think about what you wear' and, on the other hand, 'this is what you do to make the right impression.' But we live in a visual society. Forget it, that's the way it is, folks."

"When you walk into a room, before I know if you're emotionally disturbed, warm and giving or a witch, I see you."

And if what she sees commands attention, indicates confidence and power, that's the name of the game. That's also likely to come from wearing clothes that make you feel good, and make you act right.

Like this, for instance, and she gets up to illustrate. "If I feel good in my clothes, I can walk into the choicest restaurant and say, good evening." She smiles coolly. "I'm terribly sorry I didn't phone but surely you have a table for me? And I'll get a table," she says firmly.

But then, what maitre d' could resist those large blue eyes, the smokey voice, the uncommon handsomeness, even if sometimes she may not quite believe in their potency. Or her own chicness.

The Progress Bulletin Family Section is happy to run the stories of engagements and weddings for residents of the valley.

Engagement and wedding forms are available at the newspaper office and are to be filled out for each announcement. The stories may be accompanied by a picture, at least wallet size of the bride-elect only for the engagement and a black and white picture of the bride only for the wedding story.

Engagement announcements are not run if the wedding is within six weeks. Wedding stories must be returned to the Family Section editor not later than two weeks after the wedding. Polaroid pictures and snapshots are not acceptable.

June out, August in for wedding rites

August has replaced June as the most popular month for marriage in the United States, says Hallmark researcher Sally Hopkins. July is third in popularity and September, fourth.

The June bride tradition is rooted in antiquity, growing from an ancient Roman belief that June was a lucky month, especially during the full moon.

Many other marriage traditions have ancient origins, Miss Hopkins says. Wearing something blue dates back to the ancient Hebrews, who believed blue was the color of good fortune. The white wedding dress also comes from the Hebrews, who wore white as a sign of purity.

The traditional wedding cake is a descendent of the salt bread used by Roman bridegrooms, who broke the bread over the bride's head and offered pieces of it to the guests.

By the Elizabethan period in England, sweet rolls had replaced salt bread. Arranged on a table in front of the bride and groom, the sweet rolls were passed out to guests to take home.

The French put the icing on the cake, the Hallmark researcher says. A French chef traveling in England decided to stack the rolls and cover them with frosting. Viola! The first tiered wedding cake.

On the other side of the world, Hindus in India threw rice at newlyweds, believing that it would increase fertility, and another tradition started.

The best man is a holdover from ancient times. In those days, the best man's duties included helping the groom kidnap his bride and drag her by force to the alter.

An adventurous 14th century French bride tossed her garter to her attendants to determine who the next bride would be. Eventually, modesty won out and more timid brides the world round substituted bouquets.

Rings have been a favorite symbol of unending love since early Egyptian times. Jeweled wedding bands were often considered unlucky since the gems break the continuity of the circle.

The Romans initiated the custom of wearing the ring on the third finger of the left hand, because they believed a vein ran directly from that finger to the heart.

Second marriage ceremonies varied

Everybody is talking about those remarriages — one in every three, even Bride's Magazine.

What to wear? What pleases you! Maybe your first marriage was an elopement, or maybe it is your groom's first marriage and he wants the works. If that is the case, marry in a regular traditional gown (you might have a sweep train and wear a broad-brimmed hat as a bow to the older forms of etiquette). You can have a small wedding reception, or you can shoot the works with a big wedding, a big reception. As Bride's Magazine says, "We don't discriminate between brides because every bride goes into a marriage with much love and high hopes."

The current issue of Bride's Magazine has an excellent article about marrying a man with children by Judith Thompson. Basically, she reminds brides-to-be with these problems that you should give the children time to get used to you, and remember, that children worry too. Do things with the children, not to or for them; don't compete with their mother. Rather, be their friend and trusted confidante. By all means share them with their father. Let them do things for him like shine his shoes, or sew on a button, and above all be prepared for ups and downs.

On running away

It is estimated that each year anywhere from 600,000 to one million children run away from home. But, they're not the only runaways. Husbands and wives also get the urge to escape and often with little warning they leave their families. Why? How much do you know about this problem?

1. Runaway children fall into one broad category and most have similar problems. True ( ) False ( )

2. Youngsters who run away from home to join religious groups usually do so because their parents are too strict. True ( ) False ( )

3. When wives run, they usually run for keeps. True ( ) False ( )

4. Runaway youngsters, unlike adults who run, are rarely disillusioned. True ( ) False ( )

5. Discontented wives usually make their unhappiness obvious before they run. True ( ) False ( )

6. Basically men and women run away from their homes and families for very different reasons. True ( ) False ( )

7. Family contracts help to prevent runaways. True ( ) False ( )

8. Runaways of any age usually do it on a sudden impulse. True ( ) False ( )

ANSWERS:

1. FALSE. According to a psychiatrist with the national Institute of Mental Health, Dr. Helm Stierlin, there are many issues that may make a youngster decide to run and there are various types of runaways. Some run from a particular crisis. They may stay away for only a few days or weeks. Then there are those who experience no qualms or difficulties when they separate from their families.

2. FALSE. They're more apt to be drawn into a highly structured fringe religious group if their parents were permissive. Often, they seem to be reacting against too much freedom and they welcome the rigid discipline and the authoritarian father figure so often associated with these religious groups.

3. FALSE. Studies indicate most runaway women leave home to make a point. They want their husbands and families to take a fresh look at them and they ususally want to be found. They leave many tell-tale clues behind them to make sure someone can follow the trail.

4. FALSE. Often, youngsters who run away are quite disillusioned. Instead of finding other idealistic kids they often find their clothes and their money are stolen by those they thought were friends. They report that they find little honor among their peers.

5. TRUE. According to Ed. Goldfader, whose Tracers Company of America is assigned to look for thousands of missing people each year, discontented wives give clues to their unhappiness by saying they feel unneeded, and by nagging. Unable to communicate or to make their families pay attention, they take off.

6. FALSE. Too many responsibilities and too much stress are common reasons for both men and women to leave home. Both need reassurance when, and if, they return. They need to feel that they are appreciated for what they've contributed. They need to have some members of the family sit down and listen to their problems.

7. TRUE. Dr. James Alexander of the University of Utah says that family contracts are keeping many runaways at home these days. Families can negotiate changes in behavior that can relieve the pressures and the unhappiness that so often leads to running.

8. FALSE. Most individuals who run away have given it considerable thought. The problems that motivate them to leave home are not sudden, but usually existed for some time. Running away is often a cry for help. It is a desperate effort to get attention.

Tools need TLC

The demise of outdoor tools and equipment is more often due to rust, corrosion and neglect than to use. Cleaning them after chores or when dirty will prolong their efficiency, notes The Soap and Detergent Association.

Scrape off mud, grass cuttings, plant parts and leaves. Occasionally, wipe with a sudsdampened cloth or sponge. Then rinse with clean water and dry thoroughly. Keep all moving parts lubricated and free of dirt. Follow manufacturer's use and care recommendations carefully for electrical equipment.

Remove fertilizer from a spreader by washing the spreader in a solution of detergent or soap. Rinse and dry. Take care of rust spots with steel wool, wipe clean and lubricate. Insecticide residues should be removed from a sprayer with thorough washing and rinsing.

At the end of the season give all gardening and yard equipment a once over: Make repairs, clean thoroughly and lubricate metal parts to leave a thin film which will discourage rust. Store in a dry place and make sure all tools are always out of the reach of children!

'House of wolves' draws interest

Portuguese artists' home is a 'museum'

BORBA, Portugal (AP) — A stranger who stops at "Villa Lobos" — House of Wolves — may get to use Manuel Lobo's woodworking shop, see his 2,000 crucifixes and hear his tales of romantic adventure on two continents.

"I look in what's in a man's heart, not what kind of a car he drives," said Lobo. A visitor who passes inspection is rewarded with the story of Lobo's life and a guided tour of what he says is the world's largest collection of Christs on crosses.

Although he lives in thinly populated eastern Portugal, a wide selection of humanity passes Lobo's door. He says his signs — "Christ Museum" and "Antique Shop" in English instead of Portuguese — attracts 500 travelers on a good weekend along the main road between Lisbon and Madrid.

Venceslau Lobo, whose biblical-style bears an even fuller than his son's, began the business 50 years ago and still lends a patriarchal presence.

"My father collected crucifixes when other people were throwing them away," Manuel Lobo said. "It was during the first republic, when people cared about politics more than religion — rather like Portugal today.

"When he had 300 or so, he opened a museum. Now we have crucifixes from nearly 50 countries — Japan, Vietnam, and so on. We get offers of more but we have to turn them down unless they are really special."

Some of the crucifixes in the two white-walled rooms are 1,200 years old. None is valued at more than $35,000 but, Lobo says of the collection, "you couldn't duplicate what's here even with $4 million."

Lobo, 35, began as an electrical technician but grew tired of the regular hours at a local power station. He became a Portuguese Air Force flight engineer but, during his second training visit to the United States in 1967, concluded that military life was confining.

He quit the service to pick strawberries in Tennessee and do odd jobs in half a dozen Eastern states. Gradually, he built up a reputation as a self-taught restorer of old houses, a trade he still practices on annual trips to America.

Despite the crucifixes, Lobo says he does not often attend Mass.

"I believe in helping people — that's what Jesus wanted," he said. "It was only men who decided to build a house to worship him."

Help from Lobo can take surprising forms. To a 12-year-old tourist who admired but couldn't afford a $15 model airplane, Lobo gave a saw, wood and detailed instructions on how to build his own plane.

"It could start the boy in a new direction," he told an astonished father.

The wealthy pas Lobo charged a Spanish businessman $1,500 for a furnished doll's house with 3,000 miniature wooden shingles on the roof.

Lobo's homey philosophy extends to relations between the sexes. "Love doesn't come all at once. You build it up, block by block over, let's say, 20 years." Yet none of the women in his life has lasted longer than 20 months.

"I think I treat them too well. I cook and wash up," he said.

Fido goes camping, fishing, skiing and beachcombing with the family, but sometimes there is a lack of communication when the family pet gets away from home base. A dog may breathe hard, stick out his tongue, or hit flies with his paws which might indicate a little attention is needed — such as air, water and shade. But dogs must often accept their fate when they get away from home routine.

Even on a shopping trip, things can go awry. Recently a woman left her beautiful poodle locked in a car. The windows were closed and the car was parked in the brilliant sun. Crowds gathered as the dog wilted. People tried to pry open windows with wire coat hangers, nail files and so on, as the police went through the store and even used loud speakers to try to attract the woman's attention. Returning to the scene, she was horrified. It was almost too late for her animal. Intent upon getting a bargain, she had neglected her dog's comfort.

When taking a dog away from home, the family should be even more aware of their pet's comfort. A tote bag might be packed with dog's necessities — the number of units of food needed for the trip, dog biscuits or other snacks, a vacuum bottle of water, grooming aids, a bowl, leash and towel. If food is canned, bring a can opener. Fresh water would be appreciated occasionally along with an airing when you reach a gas station or parking place. If it is a long trip, wash him with a wet towel.

Pack a long leash — 20 feet or so — so that you can exercise your dog and let him take care of his physical urgencies. A short leash also may be needed. A dog shouldn't run loose near highways even if he normally responds to commands. There is a danger to drivers as well as dogs if they get out on a highway. If you locate a good wooded area along the route where your dog can be watched closely, he might roam a bit, but generally a dog should be exercised in a more controlled manner until you reach your destination.

Even though most motels will accept pets, you should know where you are going to be able to spend the night with your pet. Too many people become enervated looking for a guest house, motel or hotel that will take animals and the pet may end up sleeping in a hot car all night.

A dog may have fun walking about a station wagon or putting his head out of a window, but you should not permit it. He should stay in one place. He'll get the idea if you give him something of his own to lie upon. He can be hurt moving about and putting his head out of a window.

Dogs can be unnerved by travel. A veterinarian might supply pills for a nervous dog, but any dog needs reassurance. Pack a couple of playthings in his tote so that he doesn't whine or cry if you leave him alone in a strange room. His grooming aids will help make him comfortable. Give him a good brushing after a long trip, and if he's been in wooded areas, check for ticks. Try to cool the dog some way or give him a bath.

Your dog should wear identification. So should your cat. If you get a clear collar for a cat you can print his name and address and paste it to the back of the collar so that it can be read. Or get the cat an identification tag and collar. An outdoor cat should wear the collar some days before you depart. He may not like it. A cat carrier is the best way to transport a cat.

Animals can be transported with a minimum of confusion providing your attitude is good. If they are farmed or boarded — and rates heve gone up — you may feet genuine concern about their confort.

You can have a lot of fun taking animals on a vacation — if you have a sense of humor. You haven't lived until you've traveled with a Labrador retriever, a short-haired domestic giner tom cat, a parakeet, a turtle and a salamander. One family survived the experience.

PRETTY PIANIST — Sheri Dolph stars in "The Mad Show," being staged in the Cabaret Theater at Cal Poly at 9 p.m. Friday and Saturday. "Accent on Youth" plays Wednesday and Thursday.

Cast in new offering

The Cast Theater at 804 N. El Centro Ave., Hollywood, will present "Screen Play," a new work by Barry Glasser, opening Aug. 27. Previews are Saturday, next Sunday and Aug. 26. Mark Rosin directs.

A comedy-drama in three acts, "Screen Play" focuses on four young film critics for trade magazines who meet once a week in the basement of an abandoned building to watch old movies.

Glasser was formerly a critic for the trade publications Motion Picture Daily, Motion Picture Herald and Independent Film Journal and, with Rosin, co-authored the screenplay for the upcoming Brut production, "Body Work."

Rosin made his directorial debut with Genet's "The Maids."

MOVIES ARE BETTER — Best-selling author Michael Crichton ("The Andromeda Strain," "The Terminal Man," "The Great Train Robbery") thinks film is a better method of communication than writing. Here he lines up a camera angle on the set of "Coma," the third movie he has directed.

The three-day festival includes booths, films and demonstrations presented by various trades. The Hollywood Film Council will show a film titled "The Making of the Towering Inferno." Another film will be "Under the Sun," concerning solar energy and sponsored by the Sheet Metal Workers. "The Health and Safety Game," a photo series by Fred Lonidier depicting safety hazards for workers, will also be exhibited.

Cake decorating, ice carving and how to make hors d'oevres will be demonstrated by the Hotel Restaurant Workers, while the Beauty Culturists and Barbers Union will present hair styling.

FLIRTATION WALK — Handsome cadet (David Panaieff) flirts with a young lady (Caroll Stasney) in a private girls' school while her friend (Louise Frazer) eavesdrops and the headmistress (Charles Colgan) looks on disapprovingly. The scene is from Ballet Pacifica's production of "Graduation Ball" to be presented at Laguna Beach Sept. 3 and 4.

Itzhak Perlman set at Hollywood Bowl

Violinist Itzhak Perlman will be soloist with the Los Angeles Philharmonic in concerts at the Hollywood Bowl Aug. 25 and 27. Zubin Mehta conducts.

Perlman will play Beethoven's Violin Concerto Aug. 25, and on the Aug. 27 Saturday night pops program he will play Saint-Saens' "Introduction and Rondo Capriccioso," Sarasate's "Zigeunerweisen" and "Legende" by Wieniawski.

The orchestral number for both evenings will be Tchaikovsky's Symphony No. 3. On Saturday the orchestra will play "The Moldau" by Smetana, Liszt's "Hungarian Rhapsody" No. 2, "Daphnis and Chloe" by Ravel, and the Overture to "Die Fledermaus."

New York Times critic Donal Henahan said of Perlman, "He has been a phenomenal fiddler ever since he appeared on the scene, but he now has taken the quantum leap into a tiny group of artists — the names of Rubinstein and Segovia come most quickly to mind — who make audiences fall deeply in love with them."

Janz exhibit opens

An exhibition of sculpture and drawings by Robert Janz will open Tuesday in the Hammer Wing of the county Museum of Art in Los Angeles. It will continue through Sept. 25.

Janz' sculpture and drawings are characterized by an interest in the concepts of change, flexibility and adaptability. One of his longtime involvements has been with the varying arrangements — from formal to informal, serious to humorous — of six wooden sticks, each 2 inches by 2 inches by 6 feet, in both indoor and outdoor locations. The museum's presentation will include two or three sets of these sticks, which the artist will rearrange periodically during the course of the exhibition. Also on view will be a number of several-part drawings on cloth from the series "Drawings in Parts," the longest of which will be "Shadowline in Six Parts." These drawings can also be arranged into various configurations.

In discussing the exhibition Janz says: "The work in this exhibition, as with all my work, originates in a love for the nomadic, the flexible and adaptive, and form that changes form. The several different sets of six sticks are arranged and rearranged by hand and are used to explore changes in form and location. Portable, the sticks are always on a human scale and each set is unique. Some sets are intended primarily for particular kinds of sites: any arrangement in a doorway; any arrangement in a glade. Other sets are intended for particular kinds of arrangements: all sticks in contact with each other; all sticks leaning at the same angle. Withdrawn from a site, the sticks leave no marks of their passage."

Janz makes his own sticks. He likes the recycling process, so some are made from recovered wood found in the street, carefully fitted and glued together, then sanded; others are cut at a lumber yard. In keeping with his concern for flexibility and change, some sets are informal, left in their natural wood state; others are very formal, painted black or a brilliant red. The exhibition will include one natural set and one formal black set of six sticks.

Photographic documentation of pieces in the show in various configurations and street drawings will complement the exhibition.

Janz was born in Northern Ireland in 1932. He came to the United States at the age of 15, remaining until 1962 when he received his MFA from the Maryland Institute of Art. He traveled to Spain on a Fulbright scholarship in 1964 and remained in Europe with London as a home base.

African villages testing sun oven

COPENHAGEN (AP) — Hundreds of tribeswomen across the West African republic of Upper Volta are discovering what probably is one of the world's simplest, cleanest, cheapest and most economical cookers — a sun oven.

Designed by a Danish engineer with financial support from the Lutheran Danish Church Aid Organization — Danchurchaid — the oven is a 15-square-foot parabolic concave mirror of polished aluminum or aluminum foil. A kettle or sauce-pan is suspended in the focal point of the sun's reflected rays.

"The idea is old, as any boy who toyed with a burning glass will know. But it works," said Axel Aller, the designer, who had returned from a seven-week mission to Upper Volta to introduce the project.

"I saw a kettle with several liters of water boil in less than 20 minutes," he added.

So far, 250 ovens have been distributed free of charge to villages in all regions of Upper Volta, and another 50 are in production.

Danchurchaid put up $17,000 for development, production and introduction of the oven and added another $14 million for a one-year followup and evaluation program now underway in cooperation with Upper Volta's Technological Research Center.

Aller was optimstic that the idea would catch on in Africa. He said he believed similar projects in India and Mexico had failed because they were too small-scale and not launched in the right way and with the proper followup.

He said the project, in which the Upper Volta government and U.N. Development Project officials cooperated, aimed not only at exploiting the free energy of the tropical sun, but also at preventing rapid deforestation of the country through unsparing use of firewood.

So U.N. officials working on a program for the education of girls and women in Upper Volta and similar countries take an active interest in the sun oven, too.

The type of sun oven now in use in Upper Volta has, under normal conditions, a heating power equivalent to 1,000 watts, the same as the biggest boiling plate on most electric stoves.

"The reflector is adjustable so as to always face the sun at right angles," Aller explained. "And it does, of course, require a clear sky, although I did see the sun oven work on days with a slight haze.

"During one of my visits to a village, a whole so-called 'official' dinner for eight persons was cooked in a sun oven," he added. "Pork chops fried in a matter of 10 minutes."

But Aller admitted that even in a tropical country like Upper Volta — which averages 335 days annually with more than eight hours of sunshine — the sun oven has its natural limitations and is no good for the cooking of presunrise breakfasts or postsunset suppers.

"So the sun oven must be seen as supplement, and to make full use of it, many Africans might have to change their cooking and eating habits," the Danish engineer said. "This is why the followup and evaluation of the social effects are so important."

Equally important, he said, is the launching of completely local production. For the ovens now distributed, a Danish factory made the parabolic mirror while local producers delivered the iron rack on which mirror and cooking utensils are mounted.

Tyler steals spotlight

By DON BRADLEY
PB Staff Writer

LOS ANGELES — Wendell Tyler stole the spotlight from Joe Namath Saturday night.

The rookie from UCLA provided the only excitment in an otherwise dull game as the Rams defeated the Philadelphia Eagles, 20-3, before a shockingly small Coliseum crowd.

Tyler, the 5-10, 188-pound speed burner, sprinted 59 yards to set up one touchdown and ran one yard for another as the Rams evened their exhibition slate at 1-1.

"I just wanted to perform well for the home crowd," Tyler said. "I'm just trying to make the team."

As a pro prospect with UCLA, Tyler had two raps against him. (1) He fumbled a lot and (2) he wasn't a good blocker.

"They've been working on my ball carrying technique, he admitted. "I used to carry the ball pretty low.

And the blocking?

"I think I'll be great if the linebackers don't get any bigger," he grinned.

Tyler was the leading ball carrier in the game with 87 yards on seven carries (12.4 yards average).

Until Tyler got into the game in the second half, the most exciting thing that had happened was the signing of tight end Charles Young which took place before the game. Terms of Young's pact were not announced.

Despite the fact that Namath was making his first start for the Rams and Ron Jaworski was making his first appearance against his old team, the crowd was even smaller than last week's disappointing turnout.

Only 46,571 turned out on a beautiful summer night. A little over 4,000 more purchased tickets but didn't come to the game.

Maybe they knew something.

Namath flopped badly and couldn't move the Rams. True, the Rams never had good field position while Joe was in the game.

They started at their own 29, 20, 13 and 22 before Namath gave way to Pat Haden about seven minutes into the second quarter.

But, with Namath at the controls, the Rams netted only 11 yards in the first period and didn't make a first down until the final minute of play.

The only time Joe attempted to pass in the first quarter, he was sacked and thrown for a 10-yard loss. He tried his second on the first play of the second quarter and it went incomplete. The Rams punted on the next play and Namath wasn't seen again.

Haden was in for the next series and the Rams got their first first down 6:45 into the period.

They didn't score as Tom Dempsey missed a 37-yard field goal attempt after Haden took them from their own 32 to the Eagles' 19.

But the second time Haden got the ball, he had Tyler in the backfield and the Rams marched 51 yards in six plays.

The former USC and WFL star passed nine yards to Tyler and 22 to Terry Nelson. Tyler burst through the middle for nine more and twisted and squirmed for 10 yards after a Haden aeriel went incomplete.

That put the ball on the one and Tyler blasted through the middle for the TD that put the Rams ahead to stay.

The Eagles' only score of the night came on Horst Muhlmann's 42-yard field goal on the Eagles' first series in the second quarter.

Vince Ferragamo quarterbacked the Angelenos in the third quarter and, thanks to Tyler, the Rams got their second TD.

On their third possession, Tyler got the ball on the first play at the Rams' 24. Again he burst through the middle of the Philadelphia line, cut right and sprinted to the Eagles' 17.

Ferragamo handed off to rookie Art Best from Notre Dame on the next play and Best smashed over left tackle and raced into the end zone.

But Carson Long's conversion attempt was wide and the score remained 13-3.

Jim Jodat, who nearly made the team last year, got the third and last touchdown in the fourth quarter.

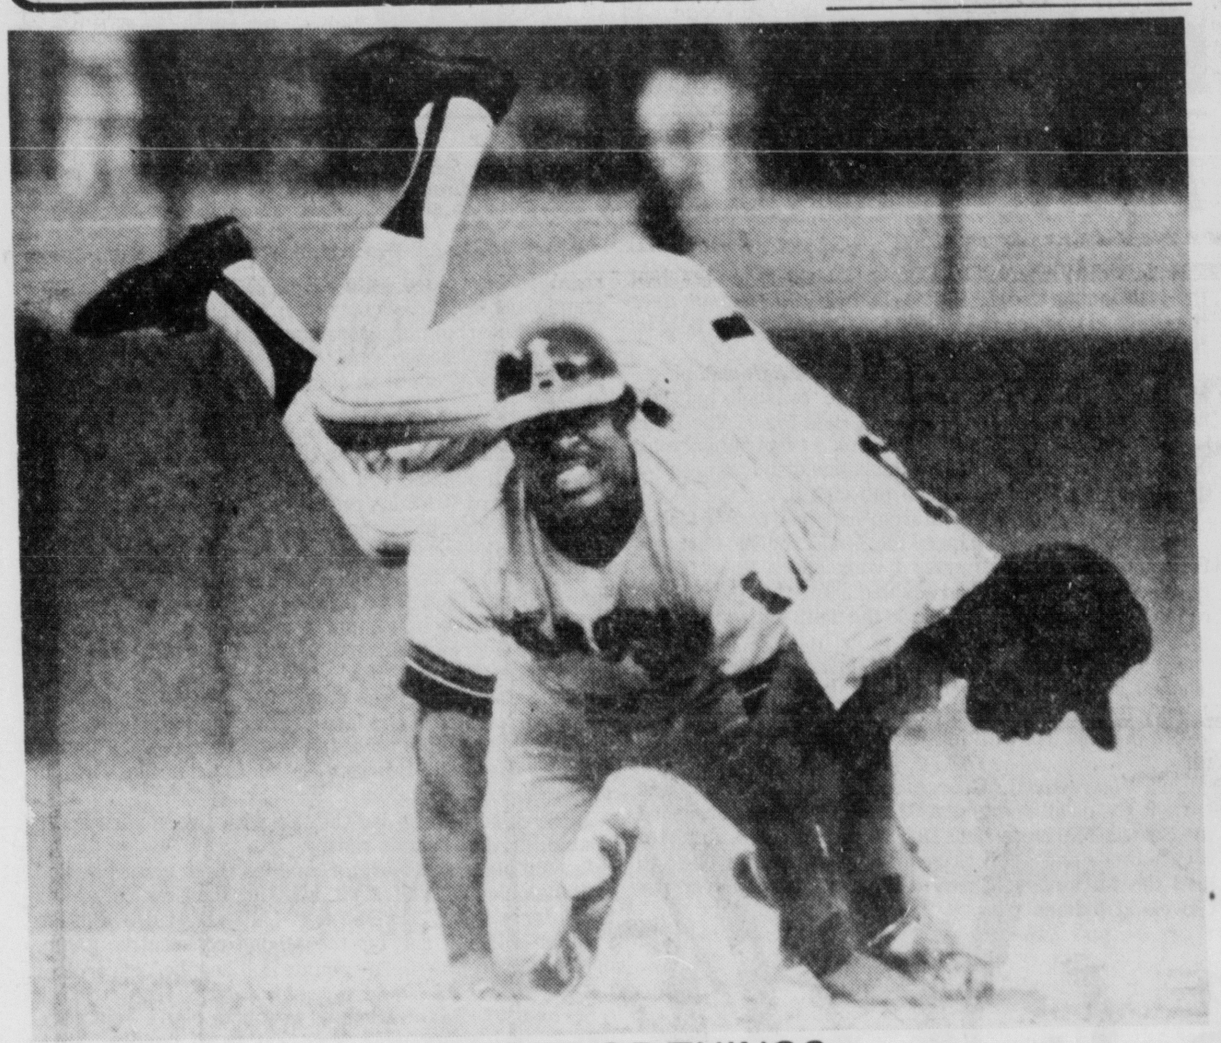
With Haden at the controls again, the Rams marched 35 yards following a partially blocked punt with the 5-11, 210-pound Jodat going the last seven for the score.

Jodat finished with 66 yards on nine carries.

For the most part, it looked like the same old unexciting Rams. Only Haden (6-of-11 for 75 yards) could move the team. Ferragamo completed one of four for three yards.

But Jaworski and Roman Gabriel were no more impressive than Namath and Ferragamo and Ferragamo has the excuse of being a rookie.

Jaworski, overthrowing the ball, hit on only 2-of-11 for 25 yards and twice overthrew wide open receivers on what would have been sure tochdowns.



ON TOP OF THINGS

Yankee second baseman Willie Randolph lands on top of Angels' Don Baylor after throwing to first to complete a double play Saturday in New York. Angels prevailed, 6-5.

Ryan wins 17th game

NEW YORK (AP) — Mario Guerrero singled home the winning run off New York relief ace Sparky Lyle with two out in the 12th inning Saturday, giving the California Angels a 6-5 victory over the Yankees and making Nolan Ryan the first 17-game winner in the American League.

Dave Chalk drew a leadoff walk from Lyle in the 12th, was sacrificed to second and took third on Rance Mulliniks' long fly ball. Guerrero, who entered the game as a pinch-hitter in the eighth inning and ended both that inning and the 10th by stranding runners in scoring position, then ripped a single to center for the decisive run.

Ryan, 17-10, allowed nine hits, walked seven and struck out 11 before giving way to Mike Barlow in the 12th. It was the 100th time in his career that Ryan fanned 10 or more batters. extending his own major league record.

All the New York runs came in the first three innings. Four of the Yankees' runs were scored by players who had walked. Ryan fell behind in the first inning when he walked two batters and Chris Chambliss belted his 12th home run of the season.

The triumph tied Ryan with Philadelphia's Steve Carlton for the most victories in the major leagues this season. However, Barlow had to pitch out of a jam in the bottom of the 12th when Carlos May singled with one out and pinch-hitter Graig Nettles walked. The runners advanced on Mickey Klutts' slow roller, but Bucky Dent tapped to second for the final out.

New York's Ken Holtzman, making his first start since July 3 and his first appearance since July 15, got through the first two innings, allowing one hit, but was chased in the third when the Angels scored four times and took a 4-3 lead.

Mulliniks' double and Terry Humphrey's single produced the first run and singles by Gil Flores and Bobby Bonds made it 3-2. A single by Ron Jackson loaded the bases and after Ken Clay replaced Holtzman, two more runs came home when Don Baylor's bouncer scooted through shortstop Bucky Dent.

The Yankees regained the lead 5-4 in the bottom of the third on a pair of walks, an error by second baseman Jerry Remy on Chambliss' grounder that could have ended the inning, and a single by Carlos May.

California tied it in the fourth on a one-out single by Mulliniks, an infield out and a double by Flores.

The teams complete their three-game series Sunday afternoon, with Wayne Simpson, 6-8, pitching for the Angels against Dick Tidrow, 6-4.

John throws shutout

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Redhot Tommy John, who says he's pitching better than ever, fired a four-hitter for his eighth straight victory as the Los Angeles Dodgers riddled Atlanta 11-0 Saturday night.

John, 14-4, hurled his third shutout of the season and second in a row in extending his string of scoreless innings to 22. He lowered his earned run average to a National League-leading 2.58.

"If I keep pitching like I have been I think I would have to be in the running for the Cy Young Award," said John. "But that is not the foremost thing on my mind.

"I just want to keep the club in the games I pitch," added the 34-year-old left-hander. "I want to pitch six, seven or eight good innings every time I go out there.

"I have been throwing better than ever in this streak."

Ron Cey and Steve Yeager clouted three-run homers to highlight the Dodgers' 15-hit attack.

Cey slugged his 23rd homer in the first inning off loser Eddie Solomon, 3-2. Cey now has 93 runs batted in for the season, tops on the Dodgers.

Los Angeles used a throwing error by Atlanta catcher Vic Correll to score two runs in the second inning. The Dodgers increased their lead to 7-0 when Steve Garvey snapped a sevengame hitless streak with a single and scored on a triple by Rick Monday. Dusty Baker then drove in pinch-runner Glenn Burke with a sacrifice fly.

In the fifth inning, Yeager followed singles by Burke and Baker with his 12th home run.

John retired the first 11 Braves in order, pitched out of trouble in the fourth, then gave up a harmless two-out single to Pat Rockett. The Los Angeles left-hander, who has not lost since June 12, was touched for singles by Rod Gilbreath and Rockett leading off the eighth. He got out of it when pinch-hitter Junior Moore bounced into a double play and Barry Bonnell grounded out. John struck out six and walked only one.

The shutout reduced John's earned run average to a league-leading 2.58.

Littler worried despite lead

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Gene Littler, the leader all the way in the 59th PGA National Championship, insisted, "I don't feel comfortable being just four shots ahead, especially of Jack," going into today's final round.

His fears are misplaced, said Tom Watson, who turned back Jack Nicklaus in the Masters and British Opens.

"Gene would have to play poorly—and he shows no signs of that—for anyone to beat him," Watson said Saturday.

PGA pairings

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Featured pairings and starting times (in PDT) for Sunday's final round of the 59th National Championship on the 6,806 yard, par 72 Pebble Beach Golf Links:

11:30 a.m.—Gene Littler, Charles Coody, George Cadle.
11:20 a.m.—Jack Nicklaus, Jerry Pate, Gil Morgan.
11:10 a.m.—Tom Watson, Miller Barber, Billy Casper.
11 a.m.—Lanny Wadkins, Leonard Thompson, Don January.

"It looks like Jack and (Charles) Coody are the only two with a chance to catch him."

Nicklaus, in second place—a position that is becoming unhappily familiar to him this season—more or less agreed.

"I've played three rounds reasonably well, but I haven't been able to really make anything happen. If Gene plays a good front nine Sunday, I'll really have to shoot some numbers. If I'm to have any chance at all, I've got to score a lot better than I have so far."

Littler, whose machine precision had taken him through two rounds without a bogey, made three of them this bright, sunny day and had to work hard for a two-under-par 70 and a 206 total.

That's 10 shots under par for three rounds over the drought damanged but still beautiful 6,806 yard Pebble Beach Golf Links and four in front of the game's most famed and feared performer — Jack Nicklaus.

The usually-unemotional Nicklaus, who shot a two-underpar 70, cast an angered glance aloft—it was unclear whether toward the blue skies or a television tower—after making bogey on the 16th and angrily tossed his ball to caddy Angelo Argea following another bogey on the 17th.

He finished with a 210 total, six under par going to Sunday's final round of the title he wants so desperately, a record-matching fifth PGA crown and one that would end his string of frustrations at the hands of Tom Watson.

Watson, who beat Nicklaus in dramatic, head-to-head confrontations in the British Open and Masters, finally got his own clubs back but could do no better than a 71 that left him six strokes back at 212.

Former Masters champion Charles Coody came on with a 70 and took third place at 211.

Watson, who finally got his own clubs to play with, was tied with former U.S. and Canadian Open champion Jerry Pate, George Cadle Lanny Wadkins and Dr. Gil Morgan. Pate shot a 69, Cadle and Morgan, a non-practicing optometrist, had 70s, and Wadkins matched par 72.

Jerry McGee, only two strokes out of the lead after 36 holes, hit one out of bounds and made triple bogey eight on the 14th hole. He finished with a 77 and 215.

Some other scores: U.S. Open champion Hubert Green, 76— 227; Lee Trevino, 71—215; Arnold Palmer, 73—218; Gary Player, 68—219; defending titleholder Dave Stockton, 69—219, and Johnny Miller, 73—217.

Littler, who had been out of action with an aching back for six weeks coming into this, the last of the year's Big Four events, appeared poised to make a rout of it when he went four under par on his first seven holes and took a whopping five-stroke lead.

But he scored his first bogey of the tournament on the eighth, and, Littler said, "It was something of a relief."

He missed the green short and to the right, was on a mound in a difficult position and had no chance of chipping close.

At one time or another, McGee and Cadle each got into second place, or a tie for second. Each fell victim to Pebble's subtle troubles, just as McGee had warned.

"The lady is asleep," he said Friday. "When she wakes up, and she will wake up, she'll be a different girl."

She claimed McGee for that fat eight on the 14th, and Cadle finished double bogey-bogey, missing the green and three-putting on the 17th.

That left only Nicklaus to challenge, and he also had his difficulties, particularly on the tough, homeward stretch along the rugged, ragged coast.

Littler, low-key as usual, observed, "I just sort of kept it in play, I guess."

'Showboat' Thomas: He, not Robinson, was first black in Dodger blue

MOBILE, Ala. (AP) — Who was the first black to suit up with the Brooklyn Dodgers in a bid to break baseball's color barrier?

It wasn't Jackie Robinson.

It was David "Showboat" Thomas, a first baseman who came off the sandlots of Mobile, achieved stardom in the old Negro National League and, in the spring of 1945, put on the Dodger blue in a brief, prankish but courageous tryout along with another black star, pitcher Terris McDuffie.

Their tryout occurred a full year before Robinson broke baseball's color ban for good. Yet their one-hour workout with the all-white Dodgers was assigned instant oblivion. It didn't rate a footnote with the game's historians.

Today it lives in the vivid memory and bulging scrapbook of Showboat's brother, Jesse Thomas, a kind of supercoach in this baseball-rich coastal city, a man who learned the game with Satchel Paige and later helped raise a Mobile crop that included Henry Aaron and Willie McCovey.

"They all came up right here. I've seen them all," says Thomas, 73 now but trim, strong and active. His memory of Showboat and the historic Dodger tryout is clear.

It was plotted by Joe Bostic, a black sportswriter for "The People's Voice," a Harlem newspaper. It was Bostic who wrote up the most detailed account of what happened.

On April 6, 1945, Bostic picked up Showboat, then a 37-year old veteran with the New York Cubans, and McDuffie, a 32-year-old pitcher for the Newark Eagles. They drove to Brooklyn's training camp at Bear Mountain, N.Y., and surprised Dodger boss Branch Rickey by asking for a tryout.

Rickey told them to come back the next day. Bostic quoted Rickey as saying the athletes' color didn't matter and that he would give a tryout "to a devil with a forked tail and horns" if he looked like a baseball player.

Showboat and McDuffie donned their uniforms the next day in the fieldhouse of the U.S. Military Academy. The Dodgers were practicing that day at West Point. It was there that Showboat hit and fielded in a one-hour tryout.

McDuffie warmed up with the Dodgers' catcher Clyde Sukeforth. His first pitch, Bostic noted, was hurled at exactly 2:18 p.m. It was, he said, "a fast-breaking curve that split the heart of the plate."

But it wasn't enough. Rickey cut them both. Their ages had a lot to do with it, observers said.

"It didn't hurt Showboat that he had gotten cut. They just wanted to get the ball rolling," says Thomas. "But it wasn't any real fair tryout. I think if they'd been given a chance, they would have played in the major leagues.

Thomas is a man with a record of recognizing big-league potential.

He is commissioner of a longtime baseball proving ground in Mobile County called the Gulf Coast Baseball League. During the past 30 years he has lined up pro tryouts for dozens of athletes.

One of them was a towering, but awkward 17-year old named McCovey.

"I got Willie a shot with the Giants and took him to the bus station," says Thomas. "The bus was going to a spring training camp and Willie hardly had a dime. He was carrying his glove and his cleats in a brown paper sack.

"Before we got to the bus station, I stopped at a store and bought him a canvas bag for his equipment. Then I gave him a dollar so he could buy a hot dog or something on the bus trip."

McCovey hasn't forgotten. World Series tickets have had a way of arriving at the Thomas house via San Francisco.

Besides McCovey and Aaron, players to vault from the Mobile playgrounds to the majors include former Chicago Cubs ironman Billy Williams, former New York Mets stars Cleon Jones and Tommie Agee and Amos Otis of the Kansas City Royals.

Thomas says the reasons for the city's success is its good recreation areas, for blacks as well as whites, and its climate, which allows baseball to be played nearly year-round. Even when segregation was the law, he said, blacks and whites played with and against each other on Mobile's diamonds.

He mentions some of the county's white stars — brothers Frank and Milt Bolling and Wilmer "Vinegar Bend" Mizell. And he mentions Eddie Stanky, who has turned the University of South Alabama baseball program into Mobile's most prolific big-league launching pad.

But most often, he mentions Showboat.

Phils pull further ahead

By The Associated Press

Bake McBride smashed a three-run homer in the top of the 11th inning to give Philadelphia a 10-7 triumph over the Chicago Cubs as the Phillies maintained their hold on first place in the National League East.

Chicago's Dave Giusti walked Ted Sizemore and pinch-hitter Ollie Brown before McBride crashed his 10th homer of the season over the right field fence. The Phils had knotted the game in the ninth on a two-run pinch-hit homer by Dave Johnson. Jay Johnstone also homered for the Phillies, a two-run shot in the eighth.

Manny Trillo and Bobby Murcer homered for the Cubs.

The Cincinnati Reds tripped the San Francisco Giants 3-1 on a bunt, a bloop single, a walk and a fluke triple. Pitcher Jim Barr, who had doubled home the Giants' lone run in the second inning, entered the ninth with a three-hit shutout.

Ken Griffey beat out a two-out bunt and Joe Morgan blooped a single into center. After Bob Bailey walked, Johnny Bench hit a high fly that right fielder Jack Clark lost in the sun. The ball fell for a triple, scoring all three runs.

Carl Yastrzemski, George Scott, Butch Hobson and Dwight Evans all homered as the Boston Red Sox crushed the Seattle Mariners 13-6. Don Money cracked a pair of solo homers and Cecil Cooper added a two-run blast to lead the Milwaukee Brewers to a 6-1 victory over the Cleveland Indians.

In the American League West, the Chicago White Sox regained first place, with Richie Zisk walloping a pair of home runs in a 6-5 victory over Texas.

Eric Soderholm's basesloaded double chased home three other Chicago runs and reliever Lerrin LaGrow pitched his way out of an eighth inning jam to preseve the victory.

That moved the Sox one-half game in front of Minnesota, which dropped a 2-1 decision to Detroit as unbeaten Milt Wilcox won his fourth game. Wilcox twice had strings of 10 Twins retired in order and allowed only three hits in eight innings before Steve Foucault nailed down the victory with his ninth save of the season.

Kansas City took over third place in the West, 1½ games behind, beating Toronto 5-3. Tom Poquette's two-run homer in the eighth inning supplied the Royals' winning runs. George Brett and Darrell Porter also homered for Kansas City.

In the East, Baltimore slipped 2½ games back of pace-setting Boston with Oakland beating the Orioles 9-6. The victory ended a club record 14-game losing streak for the A's and it was Baltimore's first loss after five straight victories.

Rookie Jerry Tabb led the A's with two singles and a double, driving in four runs.

Second place Pittsburgh remained three games behind Philadelphia in the NL East, blanking the New York Mets 2-0 on Jerry Reuss' seven-hitter. Duffy Dyer drove in the Pirates' winning run for the second consecutive game, drilling a seventh-rinning double that snapped a scoreless tie.

St. Louis, 5½ games behind in fourth place, kept pace with a 1-0 victory over Montreal in 10 innings. Mike Anderson's bases-loaded single drove in the game's only run and John Urrea and Butch Metzger combined for the shutout.

St. Louis' Lou Brock was thrown out trying to steal and his career stolen base total remained at 887, five short of Ty Cobb's all-time record.

NFL exhibition roundup

Zorn leads Seahawks

SEATTLE (AP) — Running back Don Testerman bulled into the end zone from two yards out with 13:45 remaining in sudden-death overtime to give the Seattle Seahawks to a 23-17 National Football League exhibition victory over the Dallas Cowboys Saturday night.

The Seahawks, now 2-0 in pre-season play, marched 71 yards in three plays behind quarterback Jim Zorn for the go-ahead touchdown.

Zorn passed 37 yards to Sherman Smith on first down to the Dallas 34 and hit tight end Ron Howard with a 32-yard toss to the Cowboy 2 on the next play before Testerman's plunge.

Seattle had a chance to win in regulation play, but John Leypoldt's 27-yard field goal attempt was blocked by defensive end Ed Jones — his third blocked field goal of the game.

Dallas, now 1-1, had taken a 17-10 lead late in the third period when veteran safety Cliff Harris intercepted a Zorn pass and returned it 18 yards for a touchdown.

The Seahawks tied the score at 17-17 with 8:52 left in the game on reserve quarterback Steve Myer's 38-yard touchdown pass to Steve Largent. The scoring drive was set up by an interception by linebacker Charles McShane.

OAKLAND (AP) — Randy Burks caught a 60-yard touchdown pass from quarterback Mike Phipps with 1:38 remaining in the game to give the Chicago Bears an upset 20-13 victory over the Oakland Raiders Saturday night.

With a first down at his own 40 following an Oakland punt, Burks streaked down the right sideline past rookie cornerback Mike Davis, caught Phipps' pass going full stride on the Raider 20 and scored untouched.

ATLANTA (AP) — Tommy Marvaso's 20-yard interception return set up a second period touchdown and Richard Todd engineered a third-quarter field goal drive as the New York Jets snapped a two-game losing streak with a 17-2 National Football League exhibition victory over the Atlanta Falcons Saturday night.

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Veteran Jan Stenerud booted a 29-yard field goal with 18 seconds left, giving the Kansas City Chiefs a 23-21 victory over the Pittsburgh Steelers Saturday night in an error-filled National Football League exhibition game.

Stenerud's kick, his third of the game, came shortly after rookie Laverne Smith had given the Steelers the lead with a 10-yard touchdown run.

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — Rick Danmeier's 30-yard field goal as time expired lifted the Minnesota Vikings to a 3433 National Football League exhibition victory over the Cleveland Browns Saturday night.

Danmeier, who has been trying to make the Vikings for the last three years, was given a second chance on the field goal following a Cleveland penalty for illegal use of hands.

BUFFALO (AP) — O.J. Simpson, apparently not bothered by blurred vision, scored two touchdowns Saturday night, leading the Buffalo Bills to a 17-10 triumph over the Detroit Lions in a National Football League preseason game.

The victory was the first for Coach Jim Ringo, who watched the Bills lose nine in a row after he took over the team last October and last week's preseason game at Pittsburgh.

DENVER (AP) — Veteran Jim Turner converted all five of his field goal attempts and the Denver defense held St. Louis scoreless until the final quarter, leading the Broncos to a 15-7 victory over the Cardinals Saturday night in a National Football League preseason game.

CINCINNATI (AP) — Quarterback Ken Anderson shredded Tampa Bay's youthful secondary, hitting 14 of 17 passes for 177 yards in the first half, to power the Cincinnati Bengals to a 45-0 preseason National Football League victory Saturday night.

The defeat was the 19th in a row for the expansion Bucs.

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Raymond Clayborn and Stanley Morgan, New England's two first round draft picks, scored on punt returns of 88 and 62 yards, leading the Patriots to a 38-3 National Football League exhibition victory over the Green Bay Packers Saturday night.

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Quarterback Archie Manning scored on a one-yard run and backup signal caller Bobby Douglass tossed a 72-yard touchdown pass to Paul Seal Saturday night leading the New Orleans Saints to a 23-7 victory over the New York Giants in a National Football League preseason game.

MIAMI (AP) — Tim Foley intercepted a pass and recovered a fumble to set up two second-half touchdown passes by quarterback Don Strock Saturday night, leading the Miami Dolphins to a 27-15 preseason game over the Washington Redskins.

With the score tied 6-6 in the third quarter, Foley intercepted a Joe Theismann pass and returned it to the Washington 35. Miami then moved the ball 10 yards before Strock looped 25-yard touchdown pass to Nat Moore.

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Joe Washington scored two touchdowns, leading the San Diego Chargers to a 32-13 National Football League preseason victory over San Francisco's winless 49ers Saterday night.

Connors, Orantes square off

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Defending champion Jimmy Connors overpowered Australian Phil Dent 6-3, 6-1 Saturday to move into position for his third U.S. Clay Court men's singles title.

Connors meets Spain's Manuel Orantes, who won here in 1973 and 1975, in the battle for the championship today.

Orantes, seeded second behind Connors, avenged a recent Davis Cup loss to Hungary's Balazs Taroczy in the other semifinal.

South Africans Linky Boshoff and Ilana Kloss battled Mary Carillo of New York and Wendy Overton, of Boca Raton, Fla., for the women's doubles crown Saturday night.

Six-time winner Nancy Richey played Laura DuPont for the women's singles championship Saturday night.

Connors jumped to a 4-0 advantage in the opening set and the Australian broke his service only once.

Connors repeated his performance in the second set, winning the first four games before Dent held service. Connors then held his service and broke Dent's to win the match.

"I had some problem with my overhand," said Orantes, who had his arm operated on in May for a pinched nerve. "The arm is still not 100 per cent, but I hope it's ready for Forest Hills."

The two players traded service in the first set until Orantes broke for a 4-3 advantage. He won the next four games.

In the second set, Taroczy, who defeated Orantes in Davis Cup play two weeks ago, scored his first service break to take a 3-2 lead.

Orantes, who won here in 1973 and 1975, evened the match with a service break, but the Hungarian broke him twice to win the second set.

"My serve got stronger late in that second set and I think that's what turned it around," said Orantes.

Orantes scored the only service break in the final set to take a 3-1 advantage and the players held service to conclude the match.

The women's doubles championships will follow the singles finals. Linky Boshoff and Ilana Kloss of South Africa will play Mary Carillo of New York and Wendy Overton of Boca Raton, Fla.

In men's doubles quarter-final action, Victor Amaya, Holland, Mich., and Trey Waltke, Los Angeles, Calif., defeated George Hardie, Long Beach, Calif., and Zan Guerre, Houston, 6-3, 6-0.

In the other quarter-final, Austrian Hans Kary and Steve Krulevitz of Baltimore bested Mike Cahill, Dayton, Ohio and Terry Moore, Monroe, La., 6-3, 6-2.

Austin eyes fourth title

HAUPPAUGE, N.Y. (AP) — Debbie Austin, winner of three titles on the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour this year, took a major step towards a fourth on Saturday, shooting a 66, the best round of her career, in the $100,000 Long Island Charity Classic.

The 29-year-old Miss Austin, who turned pro in 1968, had a 54-total of 208 heading into Sunday's final round at the par 72, 6,250-yard Colonie Hill Golf Club.

Miss Austin, playing out of West Palm Beach, Fla., held a two-stroke lead over Jane Blalock of Highland Beach, Fla., who carded a 70.

Nancy Lopez, a rookie from Roswell, N.M., was three under par at 69 for a three-round 211.

The field of 63, battling for a top prize of $15,000, was forced to suspend play for 55 minutes in the early afternoon because of a heavy rainstorm.

Betsy King of Limokiln, Pa., playing in her first tournament, dropped from the halfway lead into a three-way tie for sixth place with a three-over-par 75 for 213.

She was tied with Karolyn Kertzman of Sacramento, Calif., and Mary Lou Crocker of Louisville, Ky.

Hall of Famer Kathy Whitworth of Richardson, Tex., and Sandra Palmer of Palm Springs, Calif., shared fourth place at 212. They shot 70 and 72, respectively.

Miss Austin, who never won on the tour until this year, shot a 32 on the front nine and finished with a 34 in matching the 66 that her roommate, Sue Roberts, also of West Palm Beach, posted Friday.

"I have to give Sally Little (she had a 219) some credit for my play here," said Miss Austin, a graduate of Rollins College.

"She asked me if I saw myself on television in last week's European Open (at Berkshire, England). I hadn't and Sally told me that my backswing was great, but my down swing was terrible.

"My caddie (Ray Rash) told me the same thing. I shot a 79 that last day in England, so when we got here, I was intent on getting speed through the bottom of the ball."

Miss Austin, who had earlier rounds of 73 and 69, also mentioned former LPGA member Sherry Wilder of Palm Desert, Calif. for her new-found success this year.

"She has helped my golf game and also helped me to believe in myself," said Miss Austin. "I'm really working hard at golf. I didn't realize I tied the low round of 66 until after I walked off the course. I knew that my roomie shot that and once out on the course I said to myself, I've got to match that.

"Shooting this couldn't have come at a better time. Now there's one more round to go ... and I'm hoping."

ATLANTA (AP) — Atlanta Braves pitcher Max Leon, who was arrested last weekend on charges which included driving under the influence, has been placed on the disqualified list, officials of the National League baseball club said Saturday.

The Braves recalled lefthander Mike Davey from Richmond of the International League to replace the righthander on the roster.

Leon, who was released on bond, was given permission by the club to return to Mexico, where he said his father was ill, according to Bill Lucas, Braves general manager. He was scheduled to rejoin the club in San Diego but failed to return.

Vikings' Foreman enjoys living a simple life

MANKATO, Minn. (AP)— Minnesota Viking star Chuck Foreman admits he enjoys leading a simple life.

"I know it bothers an athlete to say they can't do this or that, or admit to being naive," Foreman said. "But I'm honest and proud of it. That's one thing my father always said, 'Be confident, but be honest.'"

Foreman enjoys the privacy of his apartment, and diversion of television.

"I'm a TV freak," he explains. "Kojak, he's one of my main men."

Foreman also gets a charge out of watching Minnesota's No. 44 on television reports.

"I honestly never think much about what I do on the field," said Foreman. "But when I look at myself in the films, I say, 'Wow, look at that man run.'"

The celebrated Minnesota running back doubts many things—except his football ability.

"I really never think about football either except for practice or games," said Foreman. "There are a lot of other things more important to me."

Foreman leaned back in a lounge chair at the Viking training camp and ticked off his priorities: "My family, friends and, of course, my health."

The 26-year-old Foreman admits the thought of being injured scares him.

"It's in the back of your mind all the time," said Foreman. "I've been lucky—real lucky. But I don't even like to talk about it."

He also wants to avoid any discussion of his recent contract dispute with the Vikings— a dispute settled just two weeks ago.

An extremely sensitive, introspective person, Foreman has some difficulty reconciling some personal ambitions because of his superstar status.

"Marriage is an awfully big step," says Foreman. "I was engaged once, in college, but it didn't turn out."

"That's the toughest part of being in this situation," he continued. "I want a lady who wants me because I'm Chuck Foreman, a nice guy. I'm not any kind of playboy."

Foreman contends the women are also in a difficult position, further complicating any chance of establishing a meaningful relationship.

"I may really like a lady, but she might think that she's just a number." continued Foreman. "It's just a tough deal all the way around."

Diamond Bar Invitational: always a top event

By PHIL ROCHE
PB Staff Writer

Diamond Bar country will be the center of valley golf activity two weeks from today, Sunday, Aug. 28, when some 200 top-notchers tee it up.

They'll be competing in the 10th annual Diamond Bar Invitational, a popular partners' tournament which is attended by players from all over the Southland.

They're giving away five low gross prizes and about 15 low net awards, according to men's club president Al Frazer. Players interested in entering can do so by selecting a partner and sending $25 per player to Diamond Bar Golf Course, in care of tournament chairman Winston Janes, Diamond Bar, Calif.

Los Serranos held its Foursome Tournament recently, and the results are in. In the 0-25 handicap group at the North Course, the following four players took top honors: Loren Stone, Guy Kidd, Jack Hatcher and Lee Livesay.

In second place were Manuel Miranda, Howard McKeown, Ron Corcoran and Peter Carter.

The winners in the combined handicaps of two players amounting to more than 25 were: Russ Fisher, John Robles, Harold Harvey and Ernie Ek. Their total was 190. In second place were Art Antrasian, Bob Grimshaw, Lester Ledbetter and Lynn Blanton.

MSAC's number 1 player last year, Mike Stephens, shot a fine 70 at Mesa Verde C.C. last week to finish second in the Confidence Western Amateur weekly tournament. The event was won by Alex Petric of Vista, who shot a 69. John Mack of Claremont and Lynn Stone of Chino both shot 75s to finish high in the field.

Just back from Pebble Beach where I watched the practice rounds and first day of the PGA Tournament. I was very disappointed with the course, and naturally so are many of the players.

The rough is scraggly, brown, bare in spots, trampled down, ugly and dusty. The fairways, at least early in the week, weren't much better.

I asked J.C. Snead, who had just shot 76, whether he had any bad lies. "Ask me if I had any good lies in the fairways, he replied. "I had one good lie all day in the fairways.

"The course is a joke," he said.

Nicklaus, Littler and Miller were kinder, but it is obvious that Pebble is suffering. While I was there, the sun never came out, fortunately for the course. I hate to think of what the effect would be on the fairways and greens after five or six hours of sunshine.

Anyway, I was glad to get back to the Southland where the fairways are green and well-watered for the most part. Poor Pebble Beach. It's a far cry from that great course that I once knew. But the North will get rain soon, and Pebble will once more be respected.

The National Association of Amateurs will move in on Via Verde C.C. on Thursday for their next tournament. The group has scheduled Los Serranos North on Friday, Sept. 9.

The PGA/Chevrolet National Junior event will be held over the Magnolia and Palm course of Disney World from Thursday through Sunday.

More than 12,000 youngsters participated in qualifying tournaments. The total has been whittled to 156.

Green River's big Member-Guest tournament is scheduled for Sept. 10-11. Cost per team is $90.

Rose: perfect leadoff man

By Associated Press

Pete Rose did a double-take as he looked at the lineup card posted in the Cincinnati Reds' dugout. Manager Sparky Anderson had written in "Rose, 3b," but not in its accustomed position ... at the top.

"That was the first time in a long, long time that I didn't lead off," recalls Rose of the Reds' doubleheader with St. Louis late in July, a twinbill in which Rose batted second in both games. "I've batted leadoff in all but maybe 100 games in my career. Most of those were in the early years."

Rose considers himself a perfect leadoff man, and who could argue with the best singles hitter in the game? He's a switch hitter who hits to every field, he's a good bunter and he knows pitchers in the National League as well as anyone.

"That's an important part of hitting, knowing the opposition," says Rose, rapidly approaching the 3,000-hit mark for his career. "If you know what a pitcher likes to throw to start the game, it's a big advantage."

Few spots in a baseball lineup have the impact upon a game that the leadoff batter's does. He often sets the tempo, as Joe Morgan of the Reds did in the All-Star game this season. Morgan homered to start the National League to its sixth victory in a row against the Americans.

"A good leadoff hitter will get on base 300 times a year," says Rose, who usually gets more than 200 hits a season. "If he does that, he is doing his job.

"I usually get about 85-90 walks a year. Add that to my hits and I'm around the 300 mark.

"The leadoff man's role depends on the team he is with too," adds Rose. "I'm on an offensive-minded team, which is great for me because I'm an offensive player."

When Rose was supplanted in the No. 1 spot last month, he was replaced by speedy Ken Griffey.

"When I don't lead off, I still have the same goals," notes Rose, who thinks Griffey can make a fine leadoff man because of his ability to beat out infield grounders and bunts. "I'm the same kind of hitter, no matter where I bat in the order. But I might be more concerned with RBI in other positions."

California's Bobby Bonds once was a potent leadoff hitter for San Francisco. He thought about RBI and home runs a lot when he first came to bat.

"It's hard to go up to the plate thinking 'home run,'" says Bonds, one of the few power leadoff hitters in the majors in recent years. "On the first pitch of a game, though, I sometimes thought about hitting it out. It's a real boost for the team if you do that."

Lou Brock, perhaps the only man in the last decade to rival Rose as a leadoff batter, has a slightly more common weapon: the stolen base.

Throughout his career, Brock, who will become baseball's all-time base-stealer later this season, often has used the steal to place himself in scoring position at the outset of a game.

Brock also is an artist at unnerving pitchers. Players like Ted Simmons and Tim McCarver often noted that Brock's being on base made it easier to hit a pitcher whose mind was elsewhere.

Mull new type of mortgage

Banks looking for way to assist homebuyers

By STEPHEN FOX
AP Business Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — If you're trying to figure out a way to borrow enough money to buy a house, take heart. The banks are trying to figure out a way to lend it to you.

The problem, as many would-be homeowners have discovered, is the soaring price of housing, which has required more money down and monthly mortgage payments that make you wince just to think about. It's just this predicament that has many lenders thinking about a new type of mortgage.

"We've got to tailor the mortgage to adapt it to varying stages in the life cycle of the borrower," says Tony Frank, president of the California Savings & Loan League. "To have level-payment mortgages as we do now is a straightjacket into which not all borrowers fit. For example, for young people, we need a mortgage that permits lower payments at the start, when their income is lower. As their income rises in later years, their payments would go up."

Frank would like to see mortgage payments figured as a portion of family income, say 25 per cent, so that the payments would automatically rise as the family's income increases. He notes that some lenders in the East are able to offer almost 100 per cent financing, thus drastically reducing down payments, by using a borrower's savings account partially as a down payment and partially as a reserve for reducing monthly payments.

The technique, known as a FLIP mortgage, hasn't been approved for California savings and loans, but is expected to be offered here soon. Frank thinks it's a step forward, but objects to the fixed monthly payments required. In fact, he would do away with the idea of 30-year, fixed payment mortgages altogether.

"If we were reinventing the mortgage today, it wouldn't look the same at all," he contends. "To have the same fixed payments for 360 months is ignoring the fact that needs of the occupants change, their income changes and the value of their house changes."

Frank, who is president of San Francisco-based Citizen Savings and Loan, a major California lender, thinks mortgages can also be used to help older couples.

"What an older couple might have is a great deal of equity built up in a home, but relatively little income and almost no chance of increasing that income — the reverse of a younger couple," he says. "What could be done in that case is what's called a reverse mortgage or housing annuity, where they in effect presell the equity in their home and get a lifetime annuity."

Frank says the reverse mortgage, so called because the lender pays the homeowner instead of the other way around, can provide elderly couples with a way to increase their monthly income without having to sell the home they've lived in for years.

"An annuity is simple," says Frank. "You go to a guy with a black book, tell him 'I'm this old, my doctor says I'm this old, and I am going to give you this much money.' Then he tells you how much a month he'll pay you for the rest of your life. There's no reason a lender can't do that."

Frank offers the example of a couple with a $50,000 house and $10,000 remaining on the mortgage. The original mortgage might have been $40,000, he notes, so the monthly payments might still be quite high. Under a reverse mortgage, the couple would pre-sell their $40,000 equity to the lender, who would use $10,000 to pay off the mortgage. At that point the couple would no longer have any monthly payments and the rest of the money could be used to set up a lifetime annuity for them.

Frank would also like to see what he calls a "forbearance feature" in mortgages to allow for times when a homeowner is laid off and unable to make his payments.

"If he or she is laid off through no fault of their own, they wouldn't have to make payments for six months or a year," he explains. "The payments would be added onto the balance at the end and it would give the people some breathing space."

Mortgages also could be used as an "umbrella" for making other consumer loans, according to Franks.

"The way it is now, if you have a $50,000 house and a $30,000 loan at eight per cent and you want to borrow another $10,000, a lender will rewrite the entire loan and bring it up to a new interest rate," he says. "I'd like to see him pay the new rate only on the new money. It would still be secured by the home, but he wouldn't be paying higher interest on the whole loan."

Frank believes these and other kinds of flexible mortgages will become increasingly popular in coming years as lenders adapt their policies to fit today's higher-priced houses and changing requirements of homeowners.

Employe morale major factor in boosting sales

NEW YORK (AP) — A large air freight company suffered from lagging morale which was reflected in service, sales and profits. A "positive reinforcement" program was begun in an effort to correct the problem.

Under the program, employe performance was audited and productive behavior was encouraged by praise and recognition from managers, who were provided with detailed instruction on various kinds of reinforcement.

The results: sales rose; savings over a three-year period amounted to $3 million; standards of improved customer service were met 90 to 95 per cent of the time, compared with 30 to 40 per cent previously; container usage, desired by the company, rose from 45 to 95 per cent.

This is one of 103 case studies assembled by the Work in America Institute in a book called "A Guide to Worker Productivity Experiments in the United States 1971-1975," a straightforward if unglamorous title.

Within the covers, though, are some spectacular examples of improved productivity, resulting in some instances from a mere pat on the back but more likely the consequence of common sense training programs and recognition of worker pride, responsibility and need to be involved.

At Bankers Trust Co. typists were employed at the repititious task of recording the transfer of stock ownership after a sale or purchase. Monotony took its toll in errors and low levels of output.

Realizing the problem might be in the structure of the job rather than in the employes, the company began a job-enrichment program, which means simply that the one-dimensional task was restructured to include related work and more responsibility.

The typists responded. After six months, production rates rose 92 per cent in one section, more than 110 per cent in two others. No increase in errors resulted, even with the elimination of some checkers' jobs.

The huge rise in productivity wasn't the only result. With the work force reduced by the elimination of some checkers — made possible by permitting the typists to assume the responsibility they apparently craved — a saving of $300,000 a year was made.

All cases in the book are distilled from more detailed published reports, reduced in most instances to a page apiece of significant details: the organization, the number of workers involved, the program installed, the results.

Not all the experiments led to improved production. The introduction of weekly salary plans in lieu of hourly rates for some blue collar workers at companies such as Gillette and Polaroid seemed to increase absenteeism.

But the great majority of experiments led to gratifying improvements in the quality or quantity of work performed, and in many instances the improvements could be measured by the bottom line of the auditors' reports.

The significance for American industry can hardly be minimized, since improved productivity is the basis of material improvements in life.

It means that in an industrial world of jaded workers, the human factor sometimes is more challenging than the technological.

This has been especially true in the service industries, which are highly dependent on human rather than mechanical contributions. Productivity has lagged in such industries as health, and prices have soared.

Fluor subsidiary

Power plant contracts awarded

LOS ANGELES (BW) — Fluor Corp. announced that a subsidiary has been awarded contracts for approximately $42 million to design, engineer, procure and construct a proposed 45-megawatt electric geothermal power plant to be built at Heber near El Centro.

Called the Heber Geothermal Demonstration Power Plant, the facility is scheduled to begin operating in 1980, but is contingent on receipt of federal and other funding.

Contracts for the proposed commercial-scale facility, which would be the largest geothermal power plant of its type in the United States, were awarded by San Diego Gas & Electric Co. to Chicago-based Fluor Pioneer Inc.

Fluor Pioneer will perform the work in conjunction with the Southern California division of Fluor Engineers & Constructors Inc., at Irvine.

Work performed under the design phase will assist SDG&E and its project partners in preparing their proposal for funding to the Energy Research & Development Administration (ERDA).

Fluor is designing the plant to use a new approach for converting heat energy in geothermal brine into electrical power. The hot brine, a watery substance, will be used only to heat a working fluid which can be vaporized by the heat and drive a turbine to generate power.

The working fluid will be vaporized, condensed and revaporized repeatedly in a closed cycle operation. Only a small portion of the plant machinery will be exposed to the brine. After heat is extracted, the cooled brine will be reinjected for reheat in the geothermal reservoir, again in a closed cycle operation. The new technique is called a binary cycle.

Revenues up

LOS ANGELES (BW) — Flagg Industries Inc. (ASE, PSE) announced that revenues for the fourth quarter ended April 30 were $3,696,000 compared with $3,076,000 for the like period in 1976.

Net earnings for the fourth quarter totaled $71,000, or 6 cents a share, compared to $48,000, or 4 cents, for the like period in 1976.

BIG SAVINGS — A welder, pictured in this photo taken from inside the cone, works at converting $20,000 worth of scrap into an $800,000 saving for the taxpayers. Xerox Corp. is seeking acquisition

STAMFORD, Conn. (BW) — Xerox Corp. and Shugart Associates, a privately owned Sunnyvale, Calif. manufacturer of data processing peripheral products, announced the signing of a letter of intent leading toward acquisition of Shugart by Xerox.

The companies expect to reach final agreement within 60 days and complete the transaction by year end. No details were revealed, except that Shugart would continue under its present management and be operated as a Xerox subsidiary.

Shugart, established in 1973, had revenues of $18 million in the fiscal year ended April 30. Offices and manufacturing facilities for its 450 employes are in an 80,000-square-foot building at 415 Oakmeat Parkway, Sunnyvale. Donald J. Massaro is president and chief executive officer.

The company makes rotating memories for computers, including flexible disk drives, which it supplies to original equipment manufacturers in the minicomputer, terminal and word processing markets.

Xerox already is in the rotating memory business through the manufacture of cartridge disk drives by Diablo Systems Inc., a Hayward, Calif. subsidiary.

Acquisition of Shugart would bring total Xerox employment in the San Francisco Bay and Peninsula area, including its copier/duplicator business operations, to more than 4,100.

Claremont prof says energy crisis real, terrifying; raps bureaucratic bungling

Economist John Rutledge of Claremont Men's College has taken a firm stand against the "many well-wishing bureaucrats who think they can make a long career out of solving the energy crisis" in a special notice to his Applied Financial Economics associates.

Today's energy crisis, the economist said, "is both real and terrifying. The days when energy was what you got out of a box of Wheaties and the gas crisis could be cured with two Alka Seltzer tablets and a glass of water are far behind us now."

He believes that the bureaucrats in Washington are planning on the crisis being around for a while.

"They are making plans," Rutledge said, "and backup plans, and fallback backup plans for dealing with the energy shortage. At the same time they are holding natural gas prices far enough below market levels so as to guarantee that we will have the shortage. This assures that the contingency plans will not be wasted effort."

What triggered Rutledge's outspoken remarks was his recent appearance before the state Energy Commission when he testified at the swimming pool heater workshop. At that time he pointed out that the tougher efficiency standards, if adopted, may be disastrous to the swimming pool industry, because they will drive up the purchase price to the consumer, while saving only minor amounts of natural gas.

Rutledge feels that mandatory rules, standards and regulations imposed by governmental agencies may only increase the difficulties instead of easing them. Instead, he favors the price system in the private market place as a better control of the problem.

In explaining his views, Rutledge said that increasingly scarce energy resources, for example, would, in a market free of price controls, result in a rising price for energy relative to that of other goods.

But since energy has become more expensive in relation to other goods, the economist pointed out that consumers will change their use patterns of already-owned goods, and their buying patterns of new goods. He added that he feels that their choice of new products also will be based partly on associated energy costs over the life of the product.

Therefore, Rutledge said, the natural outcome will be that producers will of their own accord find ways to reduce the energy use of their products in order to increase sagging sales.

Thus, he concludes, "The price system does not interfere with the freedom of consumers to consume, and of producers to produce, as they see fit. The price system does not require an army of enforcers continually checking to see that consumers and producers are behaving properly."

ASDC urges lifting of ban on saccharin

SAN FRANCISCO (BW) — In a strongly worded resolution, the American Society of Dentistry for Children (ASDC) has urged the U.S. Food & Drug Administration to rescind its ban on saccharin.

The society, meeting recently in San Francisco on the occasion of its 50th anniversary, together with the Sixth Congress of the International Association of Dentistry for Children, stated: "To our knowledge no tests have proved that the ingestion of saccharin by humans has produced harmful effects."

ASDC President Dr. Walter A. Doyle said: "We feel quite strongly that sugar substitutes such as saccharin have contributed greatly to the dental health of children.

"The supporting evidence at this time is rather weak in the attack on saccharin and until such time as it is supported, we feel the advantages of a sugar substitute should be available to the public."

Car rentals to women on rise

BEVERLY HILLS (BW) —"The number of women renting cars in the United States has increased from approximately 2 per cent of all car renters to 15 per cent within the past year," said J.G. Barrier, president of Ajax Rent A Car, America's largest independent car rental firm.

"This can be attributed largely to the tremendous increase in the number of women in our national work force from 17.7 to 18.4 million in the past year, as well as the increased availability of credit under recent legislation including the Equal Credit Opportunity Act. This increase has boosted both business travel and pleasure car rentals by women."

COUNTRY MEADOWS—UPLAND

Country Meadows sales set

Phase IV sales at Country Meadows/Upland are now underway with newly introduced VA terms giving vet-status home seekers an added incentive to buy, it was announced by Lesny Development Co.

The new Country Meadows centers at Mountain Avenue and 13th Street in "north of Foothill Boulevard" section of Upland attracting families seeking luxury living surroundings.

Phase IV's single-family homes are designed in one-story and two-story elevation priced from $69,950 to $84,950. In addition to the VA terms, buyers may elect to purchase on conventional terms.

"Although the new unit is in early stages of construction, the site is already being visited by buyers intent upon getting first choice of lot locations and architectural stylings," said the building company's vice-president Rudolph Lowy.

He noted that a few models still remain available for purchase in the previous unit. Scheduled for September completion, they offer Country Meadows ownership to families requiring more immediate occupancy.

Homes in the development range up to 2,440 square feet in actual living area and are designed with three or four bedrooms and two or 2½ baths. All feature refrigerated air-conditioning.

Ceramic tile entries, large family rooms and dining rooms are distinguishing features. Kitchens have luminous ceilings and are adjoined by separate breakfast areas serving/eating counters.

Various models cater to fashionable lifestyles with such amenities as walk-in wet bars, powder rooms. Most of the plans has inside laundry rooms. Buyers choose from 12 different exterior motifs, all with colorful concrete tile roofs.

The Country Meadows community is reached from the San Bernardino Freeway or Foothill Boulevard by turning north on Mountain Avenue to the sales office at 13th Street. It is open from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. daily.

Anti-anti-solicitation move

Realtors hail 'court' rule

A recent U.S. Supreme Court decision that killed an ordinance banning the posting of "for sale" and "sold" signs on certain residential properties in Willingboro, N.J., is hailed as "monumental" in the July issue of "Realtors Review," a monthly trade journal published by the National Association of Realtors.

The article points out that while the court's decision in the case of Linmark Associates, Inc., versus the Township of Willingboro relates to a specific local ordinance, the ruling will be applied in other communities with similar ordinances and have far-reaching effects.

Putting the decision into perspective, William North of Kirkland and Ellis, general counsel for the association, said, "The Linmark decision could well be the authority which will overturn anti-solicitation ordinances which deny the public access to valuable information concerning the market potential of their properties."

The story behind the case began in early 1974 when Linmark Associates, a New Jersey Corporation, listed a property it owned in Willingboro with a real estate broker.

Until a week before the listing, Willingboro had permitted "for sale" and "sold" signs on residential properties, subject to certain restrictions. However, on March 18, the Township Council enacted an ordinance prohibiting such signs on all but model homes.

The council's action was motivated by a desire to curtail panic selling resulting from alleged fear of change of the racial composition of the community. Between 1970 and 1973, the town's white population declined 5 per cent while the non-white population increased about 60 per cent.

Panic selling by whites was felt to be a major cause for the decline in the white population, and the sign ban ordinance was enacted to deal with the problem.

Linmark Associates and the real estate broker brought action in federal district court against the township and the building inspector responsible for enforcing the ban. The district court granted a declaration of unconstitutionality in the case.

Willingboro appealed the decision and won a reversal of the lower court's ruling. The case then was taken to the Supreme Court and the court issued its ruling May 2.

The decision, according to the article, amounts to a refinement in the application of the First Amendment protection of commercial speech. Commenting on this point, North said:

"The Linmark decision is the first major decision since the Virginia Pharmacy Board decision to consider the status of commercial speech under the First Amendment. And the Linmark decision affirmed, in all respects, its protected status generally and as applied to real estate transactions."

In the Linmark decision the court said, " . . . the societal interest in 'the free flow of commercial information,' . . . is in no way lessened by the fact that the subject of commercial information here is realty . . . "

The article states the full impact of the Linmark decision will be felt only in time, but that the ruling is monumental, there is no doubt. "Realtors Review" is sent to the association's more than 500-000 members in the United States, Puerto Rico, Guam and the Virgin Islands.

State facing another crisis

NEWPORT BEACH — The head of organized real estate in California today said our housing-starved state faces yet another crisis in Washington, D.C. and urged Realtor support of recently proposed amendments to the federal Water Pollution Control Act calling for a redefinition of the term "navigable waters."

Speaking before some 300 Realtors attending an investment conference at the Newporter Inn, Jerome Blank of Albany, president of the more than 100,000-member California Association of Realtors, urged support of Sen. Lloyd Bentson's D-Tex., amendment to current law which requires U.S. Army Corps. of Engineers' approval for any new construction along navigable waters.

"A recent Supreme Court decision changed the interpretation of the term navigable waters to mean any body of water which would include lakes, rivers, streams and even farm ponds, Blank told the Realtor group. "By this interpretation, any body of water in this drought-parched state is now considered 'navigable' and the implications to any new construction are horrendous."

He used the example of a lot on the shore of a stream or lake requiring lengthy Army Corps. of Engineers permit-approval before any building could be done and urged support of Bentson's amendments to remove the use of restrictive federal land controls.

"I have written to Sen. Allan Cranston, D-Calif., and to Sen. S.I. Hayakawa, R-Calif., asking their support of this important amendment," Blank continued. "I didn't realize the implications of this until we tried to build a sixplex along a creek that is almost dry and found that we had to get an Army Corps. of Engineers permit. Can you imagine the implications of such a law?"

He cited the case of a developer near San Mateo, California who has been fighting with the Army for more than four years to get a permit to build on "wetlands" in a lagoon community which has added several thousand of dollars to his cost of construction.

"While our interests are primarily those of California," Blank said, "the problem is nationwide. It effects a rancher in Idaho or a lakefront builder in Minnesota with the same severity."

He noted that he had just received a telegram from his counterpart at the Texas Association of Realtors, Reese Henry, urging California Realtors to support the Bentson amendment.

Attic ventilation study set

The National Bureau of Standards (NBS) has begun a two year federally-funded field study to determine the energy effectiveness of attic ventilation used in combination with attic insulation in homes throughout the country.

Various types of attic ventilation will be studied, including static vents in the roof, gables and soffits, and wind-driven turbine ventilators through the roof. These vents do not require use of energy. In addition, the study will look at electrically powered fans used in the gables or through the roof to ventilate the attic and fans in the attic floor used to ventilate the whole house.

In addition to NBS, participants in the project are Lawrence Berkeley Laboratory (LBL) and Princeton University. The American Ventilation Association and the Home Ventilation Institute are cooperating in the NBS study which is jointly cosponsored by NBS, the Energy Research and Development Administration (ERDA), and the Federal Energy Administration. Separate research performed by LBL and Princeton University is being solely sponsored by ERDA.

Most household attics in the United States are not purposely heated or cooled, but they usually contain some means of ventilation such as louvers, soffit vents, or windows. In summer the attic can become extremely hot and in winter very cold. Thermal insulation can be, and usually is, used to retard the flow of heat energy to and from the rooms beneath the attic. There is little question on the value of insulation used in this way.

There are two major reasons for ventilating an attic — to reduce summer heat build-up and to reduce winter moisture build-up. In the summer when heat builds up in the attic, ventilation is important in order to get the most benefit from insulation. With little or no ventilation, attic insulation will eventually absorb some of this heat and later transmit it to the living area below.

In winter, the problem is more serious. Insufficient ventilation will allow moisture originating in the house to condense on cold surfaces in the attic creating moisture damage problems. Between home laundry, cooking, and showers, about 68 liters (18 gallons) of water vapor can be produced each week. Some of this water vapor will escape through or around the ceiling and condense in the attic on nails that penetrate through the roof or on other cold surfaces. Later the condensation could drip onto the attic floor.

"The use of attic insulation in combination with various types of ventilation in the attic has never been examined in adequate depth," explains Dr. Preston McNall, chief of the Building Environment Division in the NBS Center for Building Technology (CBT). This research will try to obtain quantitative answers to questions people have been asking about the energy efficiency of attic ventilation. It is an extremely complex problem because there are literally dozens of variables, including such things as the type of ventilation system, how it's operated, the amount of insulation in the attic, the type and construction of the house, the color of the roof, the climate, and humidity — and that's only a few of them."

McNall says the study will assess comfort conditions in the house as a result of attic ventilation. The research will also seek to determine whether, and under what conditions, net savings of energy are possible when an electric attic ventilator is operated in conjunction with an electric air conditioner to reduce the total burden on the air conditioner.

Buyers' enthusiasm tapering

While residential, industrial, commercial and apartment house listings are selling faster than at the same time one year ago, most Realtors agree that their buyers' enthusiasm is tapering off to a degree, compared to activity about one year ago.

These statistics, as well as other interesting data, are the result of a survey conducted recently by the Los Angeles Board of Realtors (LABR). More than 400 Realtors, Realtor-Associates and Affiliate members participated in the sampling, according to Realtor Henry K. Elder, chairman of the realty Board's Board Services Committee.

Participants were members of one of the Board's six Divisions — Westwood, Hollywood/Wilshire, Pacific Palisaldes, Northern, Sunland-Tijunga and Metropolitan, Elder said.

Ninety per cent of those surveyed said today's real estate price levels have increased over last year's in all categories (residential, commercial, industrial, etc.). Another 61 per cent felt residential listings are selling faster than one year ago, while 17 per cent reported the pace was slower, and 22 per cent believed it to be about the same.

Of those surveyed, 65 per cent, or 241 Realtors, agreed that today's buyers' enthusiasm is leveling off despite recent speculative activity which has existed in the marketplace. About 35 per cent, or 130, believed the activity still to be frantic among buyers, especially in the residential sector.

Fifty-four per cent reported the industrial/commercial market to be better now than it was one year ago, while 40 per cent said it was about the same and 13 per cent felt it was worse than mid-summer 1976.

Elder reported the survey further showed that 10 years was the average length of membership in the Board, with nearly 350 Realtor-Associates having joined the 4,000-member Board in the last five months and others having served for as much as 50 years or more.

Real estate specialties and time devoted to these specialties was broken down as follows by Elder: Residential sales, 60 per cent; industrial sales, 15 per cent; apartment house sales, 10 per cent; commercial sales, 7 per cent; property management, 4 per cent; condominium, 3 per cent; other (including leasing, mobile home sales, office building sales, etc., 1 per cent.

'No news is good news' on housing front

No major cross currents seen in real estate market

"No news is good news" on the housing front, reports the National Association of Realtors in its monthly real estate status report.

"There are no major cross currents working to push housing markets to the extremes of boom and bust," said association Executive Vice President H. Jackson Pontius, "with the result that real estate activity continues to move along a steady growth path.

"The difficult part in today's analysis is waiting for any developments which will signal a departure from the maintainable growth now being experienced."

The report, prepared by the Realtors' Department of Economics and Research, cautions against any tendency to overanalyze monthly statistical shifts and to read more into monthly reports than actually is there.

For most series of data, it is necessary to analyze a few month's change to reveal significant trends, the report says, and there is no reason now to alter the association's reading of a healthy housing market.

Sales activity in the existing (resale) single-family home somewhat behind rates of the past three months.

The nation's savings and loan associations, the principal source of mortgage credit, continue to receive a healthy flow of new savings dollars, according to the report. After a dip in April, federally insured S&Ls received net new savings of $3.4 billion in May. This was a 20.4 per cent jump over May 1976, and just slightly under the record for the month set in 1975.

Mortgage lending volume also remains strong, the report says, as the S&Ls closed $9.6 billion in loans in May. That figure, and the $22 billion in outstanding commitments for future lending, were both records for the month.

The lending volume exceeded that of May 1976 by 47.6 per cent, and the month-end commitment figure was up by 34.1 per cent from last year's May level.

Conventional mortgage yields from the July auction of the Federal National Mortgage Association (FNMA) declined for the third consecutive time to an average of 9.084 per cent.

FNMA purchases mortgages from primary lenders as a means of replenishing funds for new loans, and the trend of auction yields is regarded as an important indicator of future mortgage interest rate direction.

Plant trees to save energy

CHICAGO — Have you ever thought of trees as energy-saving devices? They can be, if they're tall deciduous trees planted on the south, west or east side of your home, or tall evergreens planted on the north side.

Shade produced by deciduous trees during hot summer months reduces the amount of solar heat in your home and lessens the burden placed on your air conditioning system.

Evergreens block icy blasts of wind from the north, thus easing the work the furnace would have to do to maintain reasonable warmth in the home.

This and other energy saving tips are offered as part of the National Association of Realtors' nationwide campaign to encourage energy conservation among the nation's homeowners. Ask your local Realtor for a copy of the booklet, "Your Meter Is Running . . . And Energy Is Running Out."

Attic fans cut costs

An attic fan can be an air conditioner's best friend. The National Association of Realtors says a fan can help reduce attic heat, which may build up to 150 degrees, and thus can lessen the work your air conditioner has to do.

To save energy and reduce an air conditioner's work load, run the fan full-time. Cost is far less than having to run the air conditioner full-time.

This tip and others are offered as part of the Realtors' nationwide campaign to encourage energy conservation among homeowners. Ask your local Realtor for a copy of the free brochure, "The Energy Crisis Hits Home!"

Use washers economically

There are energy-saving ways of washing and drying clothes, the National Association of Realtors says.

A hot-water wash with a cold rinse instead of a warm rinse, saves up to 33 per cent in energy needed for washing clothes. For even bigger savings, a warm water wash with a cold rinse will use half the energy of a normal cycle.

Avoid overdrying clothes. Besides wasting energy, overdrying causes wrinkling and may make facrics feel rough and scratchy. Line-drying clothes, if possible, is the best energy saver.

This tip and others are offered by the Realtors of America as part of their nationwide campaign to encourage energy conservation among homeowners. For additional energy-saving suggestions, contact your local Realtor for a copy of the booklet, "Your Meter Is Running . . And Energy Is Running Out."

Cut costs when bathing

Use less hot water for bathing and clean up in money saved. Better yet, take more showers than baths since showers generally require less hot water — which means less energy for heating than a bath, says the National Association of Realtors.

You probably can save water used in the shower, too. Get a shower nozzle that used two to four gallons of water a minute instead of the 10 gallons a minute that some use.

These tips are offered as part of the National Association's nationwide campaign to encourage homeowners to conserve energy and water. For additional suggestions, contact your local Realtor for a copy of the booklet, "Your Meter Is Running . . . And Energy Is Running Out."

Clean blower blades

You can be "blowing away" money and not realizing it.

Few homeowners think to clean blower blades in central air conditioning units, says the National Association of Realtors.

Blower blades clollect dust and grime, and this impediment makes the blower less efficient. The central air conditioning unit then must work harder and longer to do the job. And that means more electric energy must be used to drive air through the cooling apparatus.

In most units, the blower can be removed easily by taking out four screws or bolt-nut units after the electric power has been disconnected. Then the blades can be cleaned, using a detergent and warm water, and dried carefully with a clean cloth. Next, fasten the blower back in place and it will operate more efficiently with far less loss of electric energy.

This tip is offered as part of the National Association of Realtors' nationwide campaign to encourage energy conservation among homeowners. For a free copy of "Then Energy Crisis Hits Home!" — a brochure containing additional tips — contact your local Realtor.

Location of thermostats

The location of your home's thermostat can make a difference in your heating and cooling bills, according to the National Association of Realtors.

To save money, locate your thermostat away from such sources of heat and cold as pipes, sunlight, air ducts outside doors and heat-generating appliances. Any of these can trick your thermostat into calling for unneeded heating or cooling.

This tip is offered as part of the Realtors' nationwide campaign to encourage energy conservation among homeowners. For additional suggestions, ask your local Realtor for a copy of the booklet, "Your Meter Is Running . . . And Energy Is Running Out."

Use hydronic heating

Does your home have steam or hot water heat? If it does, says the National Association of Realtors, there are a few simple ways you can increase efficiency.

Clean radiator coils and use radiator covers that allow only unrestricted air circulation.

The most effective way to make your heating system efficient and save energy is to heat only those rooms that are used, and heat them only to the lowest temperature at which you are comfortable.

For additional money- and energy-saving tips, contact your local Realtor for a copy of the free brochure, "The Energy Crisis Hits Home!" This and other materials are part of the Realtors' nationwide campaign to encourage energy conservation among homeowners.

3-bedroom home popular

Popularity of the three-bedroom home has continued at about the same level since 1968, according to the National Association of Realtors. In 1976, homes with three bedrooms accounted for 55.5 per cent of all existing single-family homes sold in the United States. In 1968, when the association began compiling statistics, 55.1 per cent of all existing single-family homes sold had three bedrooms.

Insulate pipes and ducts

You can save money, water and heating fuels by fully insulating hot water pipes and hot air ducts in your home.

Pipes and ducts which pass through unheated areas for long distances may lose much of their heat, requiring more hot water or air to be made than really is necessary. The loss is greatest when these pipes and ducts are in an unheated crawl space.

Studies have shown that it cost nearly $300 a year to heat an average three-bedroom home, and costs have gone up considerably in recent months. It is sensible to try to save money on water and house heating, which are the largest expenses for homeowners in most areas of the U.S.

Whether or not you do the insulating yourself will depend on factors such as how much free time you have, how handy you are and how complicated the job will be.

Also check for leaks from hot water faucets. Even though the water lost from a dripping faucet may seem insignificant on a daily basis, it adds up over a period of time, and you pay for hot water you don't use.

This tip and others are offered as part of the National Association of Realtors' nationwide campaign to encourage energy and water conservation among homeowners. For additional tips, contact your local Realtor for a free copy of the brochure, "The Energy Crisis Hits Home!"

Cabinet construction merits study

Most consumers know how to get what they want in terms of size and style when it comes to kitchen cabinets. Establishing quality construction is a different matter. The certification seal of the National Kitchen Cabinet Association indicates cabinets or vanities meet the rigid construction and performance standards of the American National Standards Institute (ANSI). Only "certified" cabinets and vanities are qualified to display the NKCA certification seal.

Motorhome buffs' needs met in S.D.

Motorhome and tennis enthusiasts can find a townhouse to suit their needs at Glenwood Townhomes in San Dimas, reports Wes Weissinger, Walker & Lee, Inc. regional director of sales for the Butler Housing Corp. project.

"With summer here and people buying recreational vehicles, homeshoppers appreciate our separate recreation vehicle lot for safe storage of boats, campers, trailers, etc.," said Weissinger. "And, we have two tennis courts — which is rather unusual for a townhouse project of 185 units. Usually there's no waiting for a court, even on most weekends."

Recreation - oriented Glenwood Townhomes is a scenic development with park areas, wide sweeping pathways, and a huge clover-leaf-shaped pool.

Not too far away, 2,000-acre, Frank G. Bonelli Regional Park provides fishing, boating, camping and horseback-riding facilities. There are also several public golf courses in the vicinity.

Glenwood Townhomes feature architectural treatments of wood shingles and rough sawn, vertical paneling.

Four floorplans are available with two or three bedrooms in one-and two-story models. Each of the units has a wood-burning fireplace.

Two-car garages provide ample storage area and separate laundry facilities. Spacious patios separate each home from its double garage.

Some of the models offer optional double doors to form a den/bedroom, formal dining rooms, wall-removing options that can result in an oversized master suite, luxurious dressing rooms, and kitchen pantries.

Less than 30 miles from Los Angeles, Glenwood Townhomes may be reached by taking the Orange (57) Freeway north from the Pomona Freeway to the 210 Freeway and going east on the 210 to the San Dimas offramp. Proceed north on San Dimas to Foothill Boulevard and turn left to the models.

JUNE 21, 1977

JUNE 21, 1977
TO: ALL HONDA AUTOMOBILE DEALERS
Gentlemen:

On May 3, 1977, we sent you a new price schedule reflecting an average price increase of 2.2% or $80.00 per car. The increase was effective on all cars invoiced on and after May 9, 1977.

Due to continued fluctuation in the exchange rate between the dollar and the yen, it is necessary that our prices be increased once again. The increase will average 4.0% or $148.00 per car.

The revised price schedule is attached and will become effective on all cars invoiced on and after July 15, 1977.

Sincerely,
AMERICAN HONDA MOTOR CO., INC.

Polly's Pointers

DEAR POLLY — For economy's sake I keep a two-pound coffee can with a lid on my counter near the sink to hold garbage. A bread wrapper is inserted inside and the ends turned over the top of the can. I am saved the cost of bags and wobbly stands. — MRS. E.J.

© 1977 by NEA, Inc.

●

DEAR POLLY — After a wedding or anniversary cake is cut, there is always a lot of frosting left on the cake plate. I use this in my next batch of cookies to cut down on the sugar and shortening used. This makes delicious cookies. Try it. — LYDIA.

●

Send your helpful hints to Polly's Pointers in care of this newspaper.

DEAR POLLY — I find those mesh bags that onions come in make great containers for moth balls. The holes let the moth balls work. After putting them in the bag I make a knot in the top and then put a wire tie around the top. The loop at the top of the mesh can be large enough so it will slip on a rod or coat hanger. — MILDRED.

●

DEAR POLLY — I have learned to avoid planting tomatoes near sweet-smelling plants and that way avoid those long green worms. — ISABELLE.

DEAR POLLY — To make a neat and inexpensive address book that is easy to add to or take from, I use a ring such as a shower curtain ring. I cut leaflets from white paper or thin cardboard, each 4½"x1¼". Punch a hole about half an inch from each edge and snip corners at this end. Write the addresses on them and slip them on the ring alphabetically. A decorative card can be used for front and back. — MARGARET J.

DEAR POLLY — Mine is a Pointer to be filed for use next Christmas. Those who have artificial Christmas trees but would like the scent of a real one could do as we do. We spray our tree heavily with pine-scented air freshener. — DIANA.

●

DEAR POLLY — When your house plants get tall and spindly, cut off about four inches at the top and put these cutting in a vase with a few artificial flowers to use for a centerpiece. Put water in the vase. — LILLIAN. (Polly's note — Often such clippings will root, and can then be planted in soil to make more plants.)

●

DEAR POLLY — Those net bags that often come around frozen turkeys are great to use for hanging and drying onions in the fall. — FLO.

●

DEAR POLLY — When your iron skillets look white inside, grease them with a spray-on product that keeps food from sticking, or rub in salad oil. — M.B.

HOMETOWN DISC JOCKEY

His millions of listeners around the world consider him their favorite "hometown" disc jockey. It doesn't matter that he just might be two or three thousand miles away at the time—Wolfman Jack is everywhere. In addition to being the regular announcer for NBC's The Midnight Special, Fridays (immediately following the Friday night presentations of The Tonight Show), Wolfman is heard every day of the week on radio stations world-wide.

"Hi, all you sweet darlin's out there in Little Rock," comes the Wolfman on the air. "We gonna get our good selves ready for some funky fun right here on good ole KAAY!

"Yes, indeed, Little Rockers an' Little Rockettes, it's 12:01 and the weatherman says it's gonna rain today. So who cares? It's gonna be funtime on KAAY with the ole Wolfman today."

How can one man be a "hometown" favorite in so many cities around the world? Being "live" on that many stations is a long and patient process, planned and prepared well in advance of each air date.

"I tell ya, it may be hard to do but we have a good time doin' it. If we didn't have fun ourselves, my fans wouldn't have fun listening to me."

The secret of the process: The Wolfman Jack Show is taped three days a week in a building on Sunset Boulevard in Hollywood. Then the tapes are customized for each individual station.

"My engineer and I lock the doors of the studio and go to work. We've taped up to 24 hours a day for as many as three straight days."

No matter where he is at the time, when The Wolfman Jack Show goes on the air—on KQEO in Albuquerque or on WOW in Omaha—the switchboard lights up as "hometown" listeners call in to talk to the Wolfman. In such cases, the operator politely explains that the program is pre-recorded in Hollywood, and most callers hang up happy.

For most fans, from KCBQ in San Diego to WFIL in Philadelphia, Wolfman Jack remains their number one "hometown" disc jockey.

Betty & David

Betty Garrett (of ABC's Laverne & Shirley) who portrays Mrs. Babish, the sardonic landlady "who has seen it all" has done it all as an actress, comedienne, singer and dancer. She trained at New York's Neighborhood Playhouse and, undecided between drama and dance, tried both, acting with Orson Welles' famed Mercury Theatre and performing with Martha Graham's dance company.

Musical comedy seemed a happy compromise. When Betty was performing with the American Youth Theatre, Mike Todd saw her and signed her to understudy Ethel Merman in "Something for the Boys." Other Broadway musicals followed: "Jackpot," "Laffing Room Only," and "Call Me Mister" where her rendition of "South America, Take It Away" won her a Donaldson Award, the forerunner of the Tony Award.

With her late husband, Larry Parks, Miss Garrett moved to California where she starred in "On the Town," "Take Me Out to the Ball Game," "Words and Music," "Neptune's Daughter" and "My Sister Eileen." She also began appearing on television, in drama and variety shows, and making records, including writing lyrics for some of her songs.

Mr. and Mrs. Parks formed a musical team and toured nightclubs and theatres in the United States and England where they headlined at the London Palladium. The duo also appeared together on Broadway in "The Bells Are Ringing" and "Beg, Borrow or Steal."

More recently, she has devoted her time to non-musical roles, starring in such plays as "A Girl Could Get Lucky," "Plaza Suite" and "Miss Reardon Drinks a Little."

When it was revived in Los Angeles two years ago, Miss Garrett won a Los Angeles Drama Critics Award for her performance. Her second Los Angeles Drama Critics Award came when she first presented "Betty Garrett and Other Songs" at Theatre West in May 1974. This year she appeared in the production in Palm Springs, and the Westwood Playhouse in Los Angeles. Her first directorial job was directing "The Price" at Theatre West.

David Soul, star of ABC's Starsky & Hutch, stars in his first musical special, "The David Soul and Friends Special," Thursday at 8PM on ABC.

Soul, who has become an international recording star, will have as his guests, disco singer Donna Summer, celebrated British actor Ron Moody, and the exciting rock group, England Dan & John Ford Coley.

Dick Clark, whose company produced the program, also joins David in the show along with his special friend, Lynne Marta.

The special has an international flavor with portions of the program produced on location in England during Soul's first concert tour. Highlights include scenes of thousands of fans enthusiastically greeting Soul when his plane landed at Heathrow Airport in England, his memorable boatride down the Thames River with a delighful group of children, his meeting with Moody in the ancient and captivating Princess Louise pub, and his smash concert performance at London's famed Rainbow Theatre.

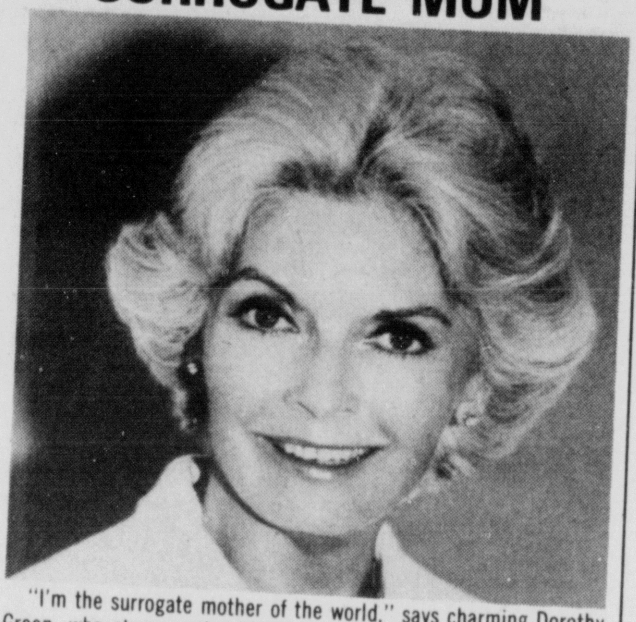
SURROGATE MOM



"I'm the surrogate mother of the world," says charming Dorothy Green, who stars on the CBS daytime series, The Young and the Restless (Mon.-Fri. at 11AM).

"Working in a soap is a unique experience. Our audiences are famous for being hooked on every single day's events but if they got a look behind the camera they would see that the actors themselves are just as hooked on the lives they are leading.

"As Jennifer Brooks, I am married to a very attractive man and have four lively daughters. Those girls have literally become my second family. I feel almost as if they are my own. They call me 'Mom' and because their parents aren't here in Hollywood I find myself giving advice, helping with their personal problems, worrying about them when they're sick, and being personally concerned in their romances. I never thought it would be like this when I started."

Dorothy had over 300 starring television roles and a number of film credits when she signed to do the brand new series almost five years ago. Los Angeles born, brought up in Santa Monica and Glendale in close proximity to Hollywood, it never occurred to her to think of a film career. It wasn't until she had been married for some years and her three children were almost into their teens that she decided to take a modeling course with Caroline Leonetti just as a lark. An agent saw her pictures and took her to an interview at Universal Studios where it was suggested she take some drama lessons.

Being a girl of some determination, Dorothy did just that to such effect that when she was appearing at the famous Pasadena Playhouse and was seen by a talent scout, she was ready for her first big break. It was a leading role on the Jack Benny Show. "I didn't know the first thing about comedy," says Dorothy, "It was a live show and there I was playing with Jack, Fred Allen, Rochester, and Lester Mathews. What a way to start. After we finished, Jack was kind enough to tell me my timing was terrific. I didn't even know what timing was!"

She learned what it was in the variety of roles in which she starred during the intervening years, ending with her walk onto The Young and the Restless stage, the very same one in which she had filmed with Jack Benny, to find the very same cameraman! "Curly said to me, 'well, Dorothy, here we go again.' He remembered me all that time! I had really come full circle.

"I think I've learned more from doing this show than from all the other shows I've done. I walked into this job just like all of those I've had through the years where you come prepared, be a professional, do your job, go home—and forget it. It doesn't work that way. No way you can work on a soap and not get involved in everybody's problems. There are so many people you usually share dressing rooms and its four and a half years of constantly progressing. My daughters grew older, with all the problems that go with it. They're different girls today than they were then; I'm different too. Personalities have changed, they have matured as actresses. I know I've loosened up tremendously. I was always very conservative, now I'm much more open. Even with all the traumas the writers dream up for us such as the series of heart attacks they're putting me through, I've enjoyed it every bit as much as our viewers seem to enjoy watching the show."

CLOSE-UP

'OSMOND TOGETHERNESS'

Beginning this fall, ABC's popular Donny & Marie variety series (Fridays, 8-9PM) will have a new more mature look reflecting the fact that its stars, Donny and Marie Osmond, are growing older—just like the rest of us. Marie will celebrate her 18th birthday during the 1977-78 season of the series while Donny, who has been the sweetheart of teenage music fans since he himself was 14, will soon become 20, an ex-teenager.

The two are looking forward to the coming season for several reasons. Marie is excited about the new dress designer hired for the show. He is the famous Bob Mackie, who has designed clothes for such sophisticated ladies as Cher. Marie definitely expects her clothes and her hairdo to reflect the fact that she is more mature. Donny is delighted that the production company and network have decided to produce half of the season's episodes in new facilities near their hometown of Provo, Utah.

"We'll be able to be with our family so much more than in other years," he said happily. The Osmonds recording, concert, hotel engagement and television schedules have—practically since Donny can remember—kept the close-knit family apart for more time than they would like. This was one of the major factors in the family's decision to build the movie-TV studio complex in Utah.

The Osmonds' popular TV series is just one aspect of an entertainment career which the large family has had for years, a career which has made them a world-wide musical institution.

The Osmond family is composed of at least seven individual elements. The first is the Osmond Brothers singing group (Alan, Wayne, Merrill and Jay). Another is the singing career of Donny Osmond, while still another is the singing career of his sister, Marie. A fourth is the teaming of Donny and Marie as stars and hosts of a television program. Then there is the singing career of their youngest brother Jimmy. A sixth is the behind-the-scenes work of their two oldest brothers, Virl and Tom, who help manage the family's far-flung entertainment empire. And, finally, there are their parents, George and Olive Osmond, to whom all the family goes for personal and professional advice, togetherness, comfort and just plain love. "Musically, we try to stay separate," explains Donny. "We each have our own audience and singing style, but we help each other. We're not just a regular, typical family. We're super close. And we all feel it helps our careers."

Ji-Tu Cumbuka, who starred as The Wrestler in "Roots," has been signed to a continuing starring role in Dan'l, 20th Century-Fox TV drama which premieres this Fall as a one-hour series on CBS. Previously announced for the story, which first was a best-selling novel, then two successful feature motion pictures and finally a long-running (seven years) television series, were six members from the series cast. They include Kimberly Beck, Chris Connelly, Joyce Jillson, Dorothy Malone, Ed Nelson and Tim O'Connor. Also playing in the suspense drama are Janet Margolin, Norman Burton and Linda Gray.

Like all work, the first day is usually the toughest, and the first day of production for the new season of Eight Is Enough (Wednesdays, 8-9PM on ABC) was no exception. After a two-month hiatus, the entire cast and crew reassembled recently to film their full season. Lani O'Grady, who plays daughter Mary, was the first victim of opening day chaos. Stepping out of her dressing trailer, she slipped and hit her chin on a shelf, and required an emergency trip to the hospital and six stitches. She commented numbly, later, "Wouldn't you know it? I've got to start out the season black and blue and bandaged. I hope this isn't an omen."

★ ★ ★

Kristy McNichol, 14-year-old co-star of Family, Robert Hegyes of Welcome Back Kotter and Suzanne Somers of Three's Company, all on ABC, have been signed by executive producers Aaron Spelling and Douglas C. Cramer to guest star in a segment of The Love Boat, which premieres as a Saturday night series next Fall, on ABC. Others booked as guest star "passengers" in early episodes include Diahann Carroll, Charo, Loretta Swit, Jimmy Walker, Brenda Sykes, Hermione Baddeley and Robert Reed. The Love Boat stars Gavin McLeod, Bernie Kopell, Fred Grandy, Ted Lange and Lauren Tewes as the captain and key crew members of a luxury liner.

★ ★ ★

Phil Silvers has been set to guest star in Rick Edelstein's two-hour teleplay "Angels on Ice," which Bob Kelljan will direct as a special presentation of ABC's Charlie's Angels starring Kate Jackson, Jaclyn Smith, Cheryl Ladd and David Doyle. Silvers plays the eccentric owner of a famous ice skating show.

★ ★ ★

Cameron Mitchell and Brian Keith have been added to the all-star cast of How the West Was Won, now in production on location in Colorado. James Arness stars in the ABC series that will air as 10 two-hour episodes beginning in January. Mitchell portrays a vindictive character, Coulee John, who has an intense hatred for Indians, while Keith plays brandy-sipping Brig. General "Brandy Jack" Stonecipher.

★ ★ ★

Actress Tina Andrews takes leave from her featured role on NBC's daytime drama Days of Our Lives to join the regular cast of the network's new prime-time series, The Sanford Arms (Fridays, 8-8:30PM), starting in the Fall. Andrews, Valerie Grant in Days of Our Lives, will play Mona, the daughter of Phil Wheeler (series star Ted Wilson), new owner of the Sanford property.

Tina played Aurelia, a slave girl, in "Roots" and Fred Sanford's niece on Sanford and Son, forerunner of The Sanford Arms. She also appeared in episodes of Room 222 and the made-for-TV movie, "Born Innocent."

ASK THEM YOURSELF

Send the question, on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022. We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

FOR ISAAC ASIMOV, author

Is there any danger that the earth might slip into a new volcanic or ice age in the next few hundred years? —Daniel P. Muller, Culver City, Calif.

● Volcanic age, probably not, but an ice age is conceivable. If human industrial techniques continue to make the air dusty, the air may reflect sunlight more efficiently and cool the earth by a few degrees. This might start an ice age.

FOR BARBARA HOWAR, author of Making Ends Meet

Since you were close to the Johnson Administration, I'm wondering what's the biggest change you've seen in Washington since Jimmy Carter took over. —C. R., Florence, N.J.

● As far as I can see, there's no change at all. I think we should give the new people time before we start passing judgment. At this moment, everything seems to be the way it was when the Johnsons were in the White House.

FOR PATTI SMITH, recording star

Have you always been a singer, or did you have jobs outside of show business? —C.T., Las Cruces, N.M.

● I had a lot of other jobs. As a teenager, I baby-sat and worked part-time in a factory and in the fields as a blueberry picker during the summer. In New York, I worked in bookstores, modeled for art classes and managed to squeeze in some pretty good parts off-off Broadway. It was all good experience, and I have no regrets.

FOR HALSTON, designer

Which fashion mistakes make your hair stand on end? —Barbara Sullivan, Bedford, N.Y.

● I can't bear the sight of extra-heavy makeup, too much hair, and clothes that are excessively tight or that are extreme and do nothing for the wearer. Overdressing sets my teeth on edge. A woman should look in the mirror, understand her figure and herself and wear things in which she feels comfortable and can function. She should start with shoes and work up.

FOR DICK CLARK, host of American Bandstand

Which year do you think produced the most enjoyable and enduring music? —Angela Goon, Worthington, Iowa

● I've often thought of 1957 as the most outstanding year. Rock took over the musical charts. Our show went on ABC-TV that year. And the roots of this new musical art form became firmly planted in 1957.

FOR SUSAN SARANDON, star of The Other Side of Midnight

Have you ever wanted to turn back the clock? —V.N., Devils Lake, N.D.

● Never. My life has improved so much in the last three years, I hope it's a trend. I'm longing to see what will have happened to me by the time I'm 30, 35 and so on. Even if I could, I wouldn't want to go backward — forward is much more glamorous. The older ladies I've worked with are experienced, shrewd and "with it," so I think of maturing in terms of acquiring wisdom.

FOR DR. GLORIA D. SCOTT, president, Girl Scouts of the U.S.A.

Why haven't the Girl Scouts developed a program comparable to the Explorer Program of the Boy Scouts? —M.B. and C.H., Bloomington, Ind.

● We have one. Our Explorer Program is based on learning about careers, and currently we are field-testing an excellent career exploration program called "From Dreams to Reality." This is the era of the emerging roles of women, and this program enables girls to choose from among the many — some traditionally male — career options opening up to them.

FOR PAUL AND JO LOEB, authors of You Can Train Your Cat

Although my cat is healthy, she has a tendency to gag for no apparent reason. Any idea why? —S.B., Ann Arbor, Mich.

● We're almost sure it's due to hair balls caused by constant licking and washing. This results in a build-up of fur in her stomach, which does not pass through her system. We don't think it's anything to worry about, but if the hair balls seem too frequent for your liking, we'd suggest a visit to the vet.

FOR THE "ASK THEM YOURSELF" EDITOR

What have you heard regarding the continuing rumors that Queen Juliana will abdicate due to the scandal surrounding Prince Bernhard? —S.B., Beatrice, Neb.

● Baron Leopold Quarles Van Ufford, the Dutch Consul General in New York, scoffed at the idea. He reported Her Majesty (right) as saying, "I love my job and would not dream of leaving it." The only thing she has renounced is the season's first barrel of herring. Fishermen traditionally present their first catch to the reigning monarch, but because herring is in short supply, she suggested it be offered to the public.

FOR DAVID PRYOR, Governor of Arkansas

What's the one thing you wanted to do when you took office that you have been unable to achieve? —J.S., Little Rock, Ark.

● Hold down state spending and the growth of government. I have had some measured success in this area, but not enough for me or for the people I serve. I think that Americans in every state want government to cease its spiraling growth.

PRO AND CON

Is Hospital Care In The United States Adequate?

PRO Dr. C. H. William Ruhe, senior vice president for Scientific Activities, American Medical Association

Yes. One reason is a system of standards that exists nowhere else in the world. It begins with the national monitoring of hospital standards through the Joint Commission on the Accreditation of Hospitals and extends to internal peer review of surgical operations, treatment by drugs, utilization practices and autopsy reports. No other hospital system measures the quality of care so vigorously. A second important factor is financing. U.S. hospitals generally have the resources to maintain modern facilities, to develop new techniques and to take advantage of newly developed equipment.

CON Dr. Pearl Dunkley, deputy director, American Nurses Association

No. Of primary concern is the maldistribution of health-care facilities and health-care providers, particularly in rural areas and inner cities. Another important concern is the absence of planning, inappropriate expansion of facilities and duplication of expensive equipment and technology that are contributing to spiraling costs. A third critical area is the fragmentation in hospital administration. There are more than 300 kinds of workers, and the task of coordinating all the providers of services is almost impossible to achieve and detrimental to consumers. Finally, the unilateral policy decisions by medicine and hospital managers are not in the best interest of these consumers.

TELEVISION'S MODERN ALL-AMERICAN GIRL

Some characterize Kristy McNichol as a sophisticated actress; others say she's an old-fashioned teenager. Which one is she really?

By Helen Dorsey

At 15, Kristy McNichol is already a seasoned actress, starring in ABC-TV's hit, Family. The show candidly treats such subjects as alcoholism and divorce, and Kristy plays a bright young teenage daughter who enjoys an honest and close relationship with her family — particularly her older brother — and experiences many of the typical problems of growing up.

Like the character she plays, Kristy is in many ways an old-fashioned all-American girl: she loves the outdoors, is honest and straighforward and feels strongly attached to her family. She even looks as American as apple pie, with her heart-shaped face, dominated by soft brown eyes and a ready smile that reveals even, straight teeth. Her slim body is tautly stretched on a 5'2" frame that possesses great strength.

On the other hand, Kristy is a modern American teenager. She's the product of upper-class southern California and its "with it" lifestyle; she's poised and sophisticated, a definite extrovert, has a secure financial future, is the child of divorced parents, rides around on her own motorcycle and frequently outdoes males in competition.

Much of Kristy's natural poise is attributable to her seven years of acting. She made her first TV commercial at 7, has had frequent guest appearances on series (Bionic Woman, Love American Style), appeared in the movie Black Sunday and soon will star in Burt Reynolds's next flick, The End. Her older brother Jimmy, 16, is also an actor; he makes his debut as a TV regular this fall in the CBS-TV series, The Fitzpatricks. Her younger brother Tommy, 11, has made some commercials,but now he is immersed in school.

Kristy's attractive mother, Carolyn McNichol, a former movie extra, says flatly, "Just because my children are in show business does not mean they're going to get everything. I feel they have it easy and love what they are doing. It's never been a case of my pushing them into show business. I've seen women who push their children into it, then turn around and give them everything. I don't dig it. I want to make good people out of them."

Jimmy and Kristy do not get allowances. "I give them money when I feel they need it," says Carolyn. "Kristy needs about $15 a week for lunches and expenses." Carolyn describes herself as, "part-time chauffeur, tax consultant, investment counselor, everything." She has made a study of investing to secure her children's future. Kristy's investments include a Palm Springs condominium; Jimmy's an apartment complex.

According to her mother, Kristy is a tomboy. She excels in sports and even beat male stars like Robert Conrad last fall in kyack racing during Challenge of the Network Stars. "It embarrassed her to win because she didn't think a girl should beat them," her mother says.

The family now lives in a pretty house in Sherman Oaks, Calif. Kristy's room is neat ("She's well organized, much better than I," says her mother), devoid of the usual clutter of a teenager's miscellany of books, records and pictures. Only one color photo of Donny Osmond hangs on her bedroom wall; another hangs in the family room, where Kristy's favorite possession, a miniature blackjack table, stands.

So although her fame and talent set Kristy apart from other kids her age, her candor makes her an engaging teenager, as you'll see from her comments about herself, her family, her friends and her loves.

SELF-IMAGE: I'm thin and attractive. I run all the time. Sometimes I forget to eat. My nose is kind of flat, my lips too big. I'd rather have longer eyelashes.

GROWING UP: I'm halfway there. I consider myself more grown-up than most kids I know. Perhaps it's from being around adults so much.

BEAUTY: It's a look, certain features — long eyelashes, high cheek bones, blue eyes; hair can be any color.

HANDSOME GUYS: Kris Kristofferson, Charles Bronson, Burt Reynolds.

BEAUTIFUL WOMEN: Genevieve Bujold — she has the most beautiful eyes.

BEHAVIOR: I'm not shy around boys, but they are often shy around me. I feel strange when people call me a star or a celebrity. I like to be treated like a normal person because I like normal people.

FAULTS: Sometimes I chew my nails when I'm nervous. I like to stay up and watch TV. I don't like to wash dishes.

FAMILY: My family is love, security, everything to me. My mom is the greatest influence in my life. I still ask her for help when I need it. When I have a serious problem, I go to her. I spend a lot of time with my brothers. People always ask me how I learned to do so many things girls can't do. It's from being around my brothers all my life and being rough and tough. I can be a lady, too, however.

INTERESTS: Dancing is my thing — disco-dancing, jazz, anything. I also love listening to music, especially Donny Osmond, Barbra Streisand, Barry Manilow. My favorite songs are "Hot Line," "Dancing Machine," "Enjoy Yourself," "You Make Me Feel Like Dancing." I enjoy all kinds of sports — skiing, tennis, swimming, hiking, skateboarding, snow-mobiling, horseback riding, driving a speedboat. My favorite thing used to be my golf cart. Now it's my motorcycle.

LOVES: Roller coasters! I love the Cyclone roller coaster at Coney Island. I know if I stayed on it, I could establish a new Guinness world record. I love dogs of any kind, especially my dog Lulu because she's almost human. When I grow up, I hope to have a dog that looks just like her. I love to travel to new places like Hawaii and New York. The city is exciting, fast but too crowded. I love to play blackjack. I'm not a gambling freak, but I love to deal cards the way they do in Las Vegas. I love movies of all kinds — Swashbuckler, Obsession, Lifeguard. I can't wait to see Star Wars.

Globe Photos

SCHOOL: I like school on the set because it's faster and easier, but I miss my school friends. Some of them don't understand my work. They often say, "You're too busy. Why don't you ever call?" I have lots of free time, especially on weekends. Next year I may go back to public school.

FRIENDS: I enjoy being with older girls, but most of my friends are boys because I've been around them more. My brother Jimmy and his best friend Jimbo are probably my best friends.

PARTIES AND ENTERTAINING: I love to celebrate birthdays. We party at home. My friends come over. We dance, play loud music, drink soda, eat corn chips and dip. I'd love to have one gigantic party and play blackjack, disco-dance and have my brother act as soda tender.

SENTIMENTAL: I remember different houses where we've lived. We had so much fun in one house so long ago. I still dream of being back in Malibu. There was the Tarzan swing we used to visit when we went out on our motorcycles. It was fun going down to the beach only 10 feet below. I used to fantasize, climb a tree, pretend it was King Kong's hands.

CAREER: I love acting and hope to do so forever. I've been lucky in my career. I love all the equipment on the set. I am interested in lighting and camera work. I always watch the director and learn so much. I'd like to direct a picture with me in it when I'm 18 and out of high school. I know it's hard work, but I still think I could do it. I'd like to produce, too. My grandpa has a video-tape machine. I'm always fooling around with it. My favorite actor is Marlon Brando because his acting is so terrific. My favorite actresses are Barbra Streisand and Genevieve Bujold. Lucille Ball is my number-one comedian.

DATING AND BOYS: I can't date until I'm 16, but that's fine. I'm not rushing it. I'm on the go. I like boys who are good-looking and a little taller than I am. I also like boys who are very clean. That's one of my major things. Someone who has clean hair, neatly styled. The boy doesn't have to be a brain. I'm not a brain. I like boys who like to have fun, boys who are into sports, but who like me for me and not supposedly because I'm a TV star. That upsets me. I love Donny Osmond. He's a very normal person.

FUTURE: Some day, I'd like to design my own house. I like thick carpeting, big furry couches, stone fireplaces. I love a lived-in kitchen. I'm going to have the neatest house, all made of wood.

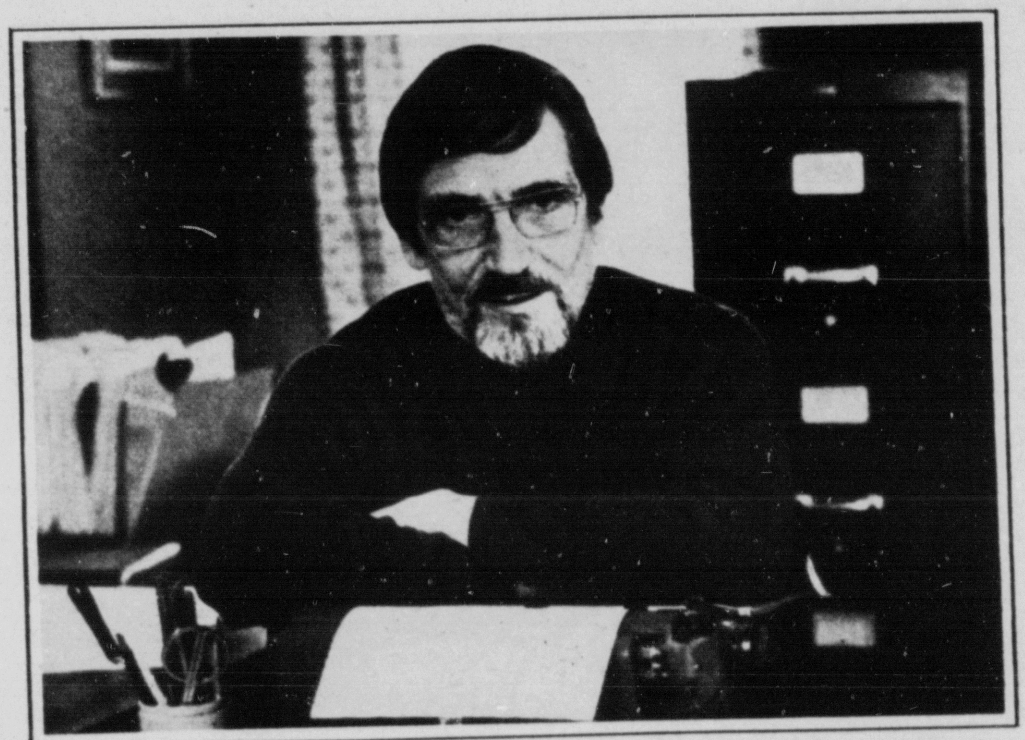
POSSESSIONS: If I were to pack a bag and put in all the things I love most, besides my clothes, I'd take along my dog, Lulu, some gum and my tape machine. I'd carry all my favorite tapes, Donny Osmond, Chicago. I also would take my appointment book. It goes everywhere with me and tells me what's coming up and everyone's phone number. I'd take along my camera, too. When I travel in planes I listen to music or look out the window and take pictures. I see the neatest visions of clouds. Clouds amaze me.

PEOPLE AND FANS: Most of all, I love my fans. I love people who are polite, not rude or phony. I sometimes wonder about the people who write to me and watch my show. When they tell me, "You're the greatest," or, "I'm your number-one fan," I think, instead of them thanking me, I should tell them, "I think you're the greatest."

'We're looking for people who want to earn money writing children's stories'

'Don't believe for one second that writing for children is a snap,' says the author of 53 children's books. 'Still, it may be the straightest possible line between you and a publisher's check – if you're qualified to seek success in this rewarding field.'

By Alvin Tresselt,
Dean of Faculty



Alvin Tresselt was Vice President and Executive Editor of Parent's Magazine Press, the first editor of Humpty Dumpty's Magazine for Children, and has served on the board of the Author's Guild. His 53 books for young readers have sold over two million copies.

If you want to write and get paid for it, I can't think of a better way to do it than writing books and stories for children and teenagers. Ideas flow naturally right out of your own life experience. While it's still a challenge, the odds of getting that first unforgettable check from a juvenile publisher are better than they are from just about any other kind of publisher I know.

Later on, you may get other checks from other publishers. But right now, the object is to begin — to break into print — to learn the feeling of writing and selling your work and seeing your name in type. After that, you can decide if you want your writing to take another direction.

But after 30 years of editing, publishing, and teaching — and 53 books — I can tell you this: you'll go a long way before you discover anything as rewarding as writing for young readers.

Your words will never sound as sweet as they do on the lips of a child reading your books and stories. And the joy of creating books and stories that young people 'really dig' is an experience you'll never have anywhere else.

But, that's not all. The financial rewards go far beyond most people's expectations because there's a surprisingly big market out there for writers who are trained to crack it. More than 130 million young people's books are purchased each year. Between 2,000 and 2,500 new titles appear annually and new authors account for as many as half of them.

There are also 250 monthly magazines looking for material for young readers. You can imagine how much writing it takes just to keep them going!

Yet two big questions bedevil nearly every would-be writer: "Am I really qualified?" and "How can I get started?"

'Am I really qualified?'

This is our definition of a "qualified person": It's someone with an aptitude for writing who can take constructive criticism, learn from it, and turn it into a professional performance. Nobody else can get into the Institute of Children's Literature. The reasons are simple: our reputation is built on success, and if prospective students don't have the earmarks of success to begin with, we probably can't help them. And we tell them so. It's only fair to both of us.

To help us spot potential authors, we've developed a revealing test for writing aptitude. It's free, and we don't charge for our evaluation. But no one gets into the Institute without passing it. Those who pass and enroll receive our promise: You will complete at least one manuscript ready to submit to a publisher by the time you finish the Course.

When we teach, you learn

I've learned a lot about writing for children and I love it. Now I'm passing my knowledge on to my students so they can profit from it. When I'm not writing my own children's books I spend my time at the Institute of Children's Literature, a workshop for writers that does only one thing and does it better than any other school or college or university I know: It trains qualified people to write for the young reader. (In this age of boob tube illiteracy, convenient morality, and plastic values, do you know of a more important audience?)

This is the way I work with my students, and my fellow instructors — all of whom are experienced writers or editors — work more or less the same way.

When you're ready — at your own time and your own pace — you send your assignment to me and I read it and reread it to get everything out of it you've put into it. Then I edit your assignment with a red pencil just the way a publishing house editor would. I return it along with a detailed letter explaining my editorial comments. I tell you what your strong points are, what your weaknesses are, and just what you can do to improve. It's a matter of push and pull. You push and I pull and between us both, you learn to write.

The proof of the pudding

This method really works. I wouldn't spend five minutes at it if it didn't. The proof of the pudding is that many of our students break into print even before they finish the Course.

Kathleen Huber, New York, N.Y., writes: "Regarding my sale to Highlights for Children for $125, it started out as a story assignment for the Institute, and Highlights was only the second magazine I had sent it to. Certainly your Course made this sale possible. It may be the best investment I ever made."

A.M. Hummel, Danville, Pa., writes, "When Highlights for Children accepted my short story — Assignment #8 in the Course, and sent me a $65 check, I could hardly believe it! Then, within a week, I got another check and a go-ahead assignment for a second piece."

'I won first prize of $400 for a Course assignment!'

"Before taking your Course, (which I checked out with the National Better Business Bureau), the short stories I scribbled for my two tiny tots never caught an editor's fancy," writes Emily Burns of Salem, Oregon.

"My first sale, to National Catholic Weekly, was a Course assignment. Then I submitted another Course assignment in a creative writer's competition and won first prize of $400!"

The American Indian Treaty Council proudly presents

The Great American Indian Chiefs Medal Collection

IN SOLID STERLING SILVER

An historic collection of finely sculptured silver medals portraying the greatest chieftains and warriors in the history of America's Indian tribes.

Each medal will be designed by the distinguished American Indian artist Oren Lyons.

Subscriptions for this limited edition collection are now being accepted. There is a limit of one subscription per person, and the absolute subscription deadline is August 25, 1977.

The American Indian has always been an indomitable figure. Courageous, stalwart, incredibly brave. Proud and independent—defending his treasured lands and traditions with unshakable resolve, even in the face of the most overpowering odds.

And the inspiration and leadership for his cause has been provided by many of the most heroic figures in all history. Great chiefs and warriors whose very names have become legend. Cochise. Sitting Bull. Black Hawk. Quanah Parker. Osceola. Their deeds are a rich and enduring part of American history.

And so, in tribute to the great Indian leaders who have shaped this proud heritage, The American Indian Treaty Council will now issue an historic commemorative collection. A distinctive and compelling series of finely sculptured sterling silver medallions—designed by a noted American Indian artist.

The definitive medallic tribute

This collection will form a definitive medallic tribute to the great leaders of the Indian cause —from the earliest known history to the present day.

Some of them are familiar to everyone. Others are not so well known. Yet all of them played significant roles in the saga of the American Indian:

Tecumseh, for instance, the Shawnee warrior-statesman who became a Brigadier General in the British Army . . . Chief Joseph of the Nez Perce, who led one of the most brilliant and heroic campaigns in military history . . . Red Cloud, the only Indian leader ever to win a war with the United States . . . Pontiac, who organized a powerful alliance of Indian tribes to aid France in its war with England . . . Roman Nose, the brave Cheyenne chieftain who led his people in the struggle to retain their vanishing lands . . .

Crazy Horse, the courageous Sioux warrior whose defeat of General Custer made him a legend in his own time . . . Popé, leader of a massive revolt that liberated the Pueblos from Spanish rule . . . Massasoit, who befriended the Mayflower Pilgrims and was an honored guest at the first Thanksgiving feast . . . and Geronimo, a fighter of legendary ferocity, and the most feared of all Apache war leaders.

In all, the collection will honor thirty-six outstanding American Indian chieftains and warriors—men who brought honor and glory to their people, and whose contributions will now be permanently and appropriately commemorated in this official collection of sterling silver portrait medals.

Designed by a brilliant American Indian artist

To create the designs for these historic medals, The American Indian Treaty Council has chosen the celebrated Indian artist Oren Lyons. This is a most appropriate selection. For Oren Lyons is a recognized authority on Indian lore and history as well as a gifted and distinguished artist. Thus, each of the medals will be historically accurate and authentic in every detail—in addition to being an outstanding work of art.

The face of each medal will bear a finely detailed sculpture portraying the Indian leader it honors, together with an appropriate design evoking his most significant achievement. The reverse will carry his name and that of his tribe, along with a statement of his importance in Indian history.

Moreover, each medal will be minted for the Council by The Franklin Mint, America's most respected private mint. And each one will bear the brilliant Proof finish that is used to distinguish medals of lasting significance—with every Proof medal struck from specially polished dies, so that the rich frosted sculpture stands out in dramatic relief against the shining silver background.

A rare and exclusive collection

Because the heritage of the American Indian has contributed so much to the heritage of the American people, this historic collection will be minted not only for the Council, but for all individual collectors who are fascinated by the epic of American history. At the same time, however, the Council has ruled that the collection is to be both rare and exclusive. Thus, it has ordered that there be only one edition, and has imposed a strict limit of one Proof Set per subscriber. The total number of sets will thus be permanently restricted to the exact number of valid subscriptions mailed by August 25, 1977. Then, when all subscribers have received their medals, the minting dies will be destroyed —thereby assuring that this monumental tribute to the greatest Indian chiefs in American history can never be issued again.

The medals will be issued to subscribers at the rate of one per month, beginning in late September of 1977. The official issue price of $19.50 for each large (36mm diameter) solid sterling silver Proof will be guaranteed to each subscriber for the entire series. A handsome and durable display album—bearing an authentic Indian symbol—will be provided at no additional charge. Each medal, moreover, will be accompanied by a carefully authenticated biography of the Indian leader portrayed.

An exceptionally meaningful commemoration

The vision and courage of the great Indian chieftains and warriors portrayed in this collection are richly deserving of commemoration. Indeed, their determination to stand firmly for what they believed was right provides lasting inspiration to freedom-loving peoples throughout the world.

The Great American Indian Chiefs Medal Collection is thus intended to be a meaningful and honored possession for the family that owns it. A collection to be admired always for its historical importance and educational value, as well as its distinctive and enduring quality.

Subscription applications must be postmarked by August 25, 1977

To enter a subscription for your Proof Set of The Great American Indian Chiefs Medal Collection, you must complete the application below and mail by August 25, 1977. Applications that bear later postmarks will be declined and returned.

COUNTRY FRIED CHICKEN

½ cup all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon paprika
¼ teaspoon ground black pepper
Vegetable shortening or vegetable oil
1 (3- or 4-lb. size) broiler-fryer, cut into serving pieces

1. Mix dry ingredients together in a plastic or paper bag.
2. Rinse the chicken in cold running water but don't dry it. Drop two or three pieces at a time into flour mixture and shake until coated.
3. In skillet, heat enough shortening to make ½-inch depth when melted. Continue heating over medium-high heat or until a drop of water sizzles when added to oil.
4. Place chicken, skin side down in pan; cook until brown. Turn chicken and brown other side; reduce heat to medium-low and cook until tender (about 30 minutes or until chicken is easily pierced with a fork). Drain on absorbent paper.

Makes 2 to 4 servings

Variation: Extra Crispy Potato Fried

Dip chicken pieces in slightly beaten egg seasoned with salt and pepper. Then roll pieces in instant potato flakes to coat well; pan or oven fry (on well-greased baking pan at 350°F. for about 1 hour) until crisp and tender. Serve hot or cold.

CALICO BEAN SALAD

1 can (1 lb.) chick peas, drained and rinsed
1 can (1 lb.) kidney beans, drained and rinsed
1 cup chopped celery
1 cup chopped green pepper
1 cup cherry tomatoes, halved
Crisp iceberg and romaine lettuce leaves

Chili Dressing

½ cup tomato juice
½ cup vegetable oil
¼ cup vinegar
1 envelope (1¾ ozs.) chili seasoning

1. Combine chick peas, beans, celery, green pepper and tomatoes. Add enough Chili Dressing (recipe follows) to moisten, and toss gently. Cover and refrigerate. Serve over greens.
2. Chili Dressing: Combine tomato juice, vegetable oil, vinegar, chili seasoning. Stir or shake until well blended.

Makes 6 servings, 1⅓ cups dressing

TASTY TEXAS BARBECUED CHICKEN

1 cup ketchup
1 cup hot water
¼ cup vinegar
¼ cup butter or margarine
2 tablespoons instant minced onion
2 tablespoons Worcestershire sauce
1 teaspoon instant coffee powder
1 teaspoon chili powder
1 chicken bouillon cube
⅛ teaspoon cayenne pepper
3 (3-or 4-lb. size) broiler-fryer chickens, halved, or whole chicken legs

CB'ers HELP THE POLICE DO THEIR JOB

What began as a way to outwit "Smokey" has become, as one lawman puts it, the century's most revolutionary idea in law enforcement.

By Paula Dranov

Don't look now, but Smokey the Bear has his ears on and is modulatin' with all the good buddies out there in CB land from the Dirty Side to Shaky City. He's copying the mail on Channels 9 and 19. Do you read me?

If you've got a CB, you probably do. If not, here's a translation: highway patrolmen across the nation from New York (the Dirty Side) to Los Angeles (Shaky City) are monitoring citizen band radio channels 9 (the emergency channel) and 19 (the truckers' channel). And so are thousands of other CB'ers in one of the largest highway safety efforts to date. In the three short years since the CB craze began, it has evolved from a means of evading the law to a means of enforcing it.

As just about everyone knows by now, the CB phenomenon started with truckers as a means of breaking the monotony and alerting one another to speed traps and traffic snarls. The truckers spoke in an elaborate code—highway patrolmen were "Smokey the Bear" because of the wide-brimmed hats they wore; the 55-mph speed limit was the "double nickel"; gasoline, "motion lotion"; speeding tickets "bear bites" or "green stamps." Newcomers to the CB scene were mystified by messages like "Smile and comb your hair. There's a Smokey in the grass by the 80-mile marker, and he's takin' pictures." (Translation: Radar ahead.)

Today, about 20 million Americans hold licenses, and Col. Sam J. Smith, superintendent of the Missouri State Highway Patrol, sees the use of CBs as potentially "the most revolutionary idea to occur in law enforcement in this century because they will provide a means whereby the citizen can become involved in law enforcement."

The Federal Government has authorized states to use Federal highway safety funds for the purchase of CBs. Missouri was the first state to equip all its patrol cars with CB radios after 240 state troopers had established their value by buying and using their own. In the first year, the police logged more than 99,000 CB contacts resulting in 6,313 drunk-driving convictions, 5,882 speeding tickets and 4,615 calls that led to arrests for other offenses.

Since then, North Carolina, Pennsylvania, Colorado, New York, Kansas, California, Michigan, Illinois, Ohio, Colorado and New Mexico have equipped some or all of their patrol cars with CBs. In Pennsylvania, to cite only one example, so many motorists are equipped with CBs that the state decided to eliminate the emergency telephone system on its section of Interstate 80 because help is likely to come faster through the CB channels than it did through the emergency telephone system.

Now police are busy dreaming up new ways to use CBs in crime prevention. Not long ago Robert Ferguson, president of the American Federation of Police, called on all licensed CB'ers to form a "CB National Posse" to help police fight crime. Ferguson, a CB'er who goes by the handle of "Smokey Bear 1," proposes that CB'ers use their radios to report crimes, automobile accidents and other problems in their communities. In some areas, similar programs already are in operation.

So, as they say in CB land, keep the rolling side down and the shiny side up. We up, we down, we clear, we gone.

PEOPLE & YOU

Breaking Bad Habits — And Making Good Ones

Willpower alone usually isn't enough. In his book Habits, How We Get Them, Why We Keep Them, How We Kick Them (Thomas Nelson Inc.), Richard Stiller suggests the following proven habit-breaking techniques. Interrupt the pattern. For example, if you find you snack too much during the evening as you watch television, break the habit by changing the pattern: visit friends or work at a hobby. Create a new and competing habit. If you're watching your diet, you can create the competing habit of reaching for a low-calorie goodie instead of candy. Wear out the habit by repeating it over and over until disgust or exhaustion weakens the habit's hold.

In addition to physical habits, there are life-pattern habits, such as the habit of success or failure. Stiller explains that success often depends upon having formed the habit of expecting it. With this attitude, you have an excellent chance of achieving your goals "because you will behave so as to bring them about." You can also influence whether your children develop a success or a failure habit. Psychologists have discovered that children who believe others have a low opinion of their ability sink into a pattern of failure and "just don't seem to try." But it works the other way, too. "Children's expectation of success or failure comes largely from others, mostly from parents and teachers. If they are convinced a child has ability, that conviction will powerfully motivate the child to succeed." In other words, if you get into the habit of believing in your children, they will probably develop the habit of believing in themselves.

MONEY

A Will Of Her Own

There are many reasons why every wife should have a will of her own. For instance, most women own more property than they realize: a car, securities, valuable silver, jewelry. In community-property law states, a woman is also the legal owner of half of all assets acquired by a couple during their marriage. When the disposition of this property is left to chance, or to the vagaries of state law, some surprising things can happen.

Consider this example: A car accident killed Mrs. A. and severely injured her husband. Most of the family's assets had been in the wife's name, and in the absence of a will, state laws required that two-thirds go to the couple's young children and one-third to Mr. A. The children's inheritance was put in trust under the supervision of a court-appointed administrator, but between court costs and administrative fees, much of the money was siphoned away. Meanwhile, the small sum Mr. A. inherited was not enough to cover his medical bills.

With a will of her own, a woman can have the peace of mind that goes with knowing her property — however small — will pass to the people or the charities of her choice and in the exact amounts she wishes. A husband and wife should draw up their wills at the same time to make sure their provisions mesh. (Reaching joint decisions about executors, guardians and heirs will also be easier.)

It's technically legal to draw up your own will, but having a lawyer do it is far safer and more sensible. The fee is usually modest, unless there is a large estate with complex inheritance provisions.

Don't keep a will in a safe-deposit box. A vault is sealed when a person dies, and a court order must be obtained to open it.

HELICOPTERS TO THE RESCUE

Military choppers are rushing life-saving aid to critically ill and injured civilians in many of our isolated areas.

By Jack Galub

MAST stands for Military Assistance to Safety and Traffic, a program launched in 1970 that lets military choppers airlift critically ill or injured civilians to hospitals without charge. Since its start it has flown more than 9,000 life-saving missions, and, because it meets a pressing need felt especially by rural and isolated communities, it has grown from its original four bases to include 17 Army and seven Air Force posts scattered across the country.

The stories of the good the program does are innumerable and heart-warming. For example, more than 1,000 campers, tourists and local residents will never forget the nightmare they lived through last summer before being airlifted out of Big Thompson Canyon in Colorado.

It began with a cloudburst that dumped nearly 11 inches of rain in four hours on the peaceful resort area between Estes Park and Loveland. The rain turned the beautiful Big Thompson River into a rampaging killer. With the highway blocked at both ends and washed away inside the canyon, air was the only escape route.

"At first we thought only a couple of bridges had been washed out," says Major Frank Gilliam, whose unit at Fort Carson was the first to fly. "But when we got up there, it was obvious it wasn't just a few campgrounds that had been hit. The whole valley had been washed away."

Yet, even before the flood subsided, the Fort Carson choppers shuttled up and down the steep canyon searching for and picking up stranded groups of survivors.

Community groups make up the civilian backbone of the MAST operation. The military furnishes the helicopters, crews and standard equipment. Local people provide the rest. Hospitals either build landing pads or arrange for parking-lot space whenever they are part of a mission. Local funds buy isolettes, oxygen and cardiac-care equipment, stretchers, FM two-way radios to let chopper crews talk with hospitals and beepers to alert crews that a mission is being called.

To enhance the capabilities of the crews that work with them, hospitals often set up training programs for medics who fly MAST missions. This training is rewarded in lives saved, as in this case: A truck carrying bricks overturned, and helicopters out of Fort Riley, Kan., responded to a call from the sheriff's office. They found the driver pinned face down inside the cab, one of his legs partially severed, and suffering with head and back injuries.

While the paramedic worked to stop the loss of blood and to ease the pain, the crew chief organized the rescue. Eventually, tow trucks, chains, lifts, pneumatic jacks, spreaders and even a front-load bulldozer were used to free the driver. Due to the medic's ability to stop blood loss and handle shock, the driver was in good condition when he reached a hospital.

A MAST team on another mission.

Crews do not fly a mission and call it a day — or a night. The log at Fort Campbell, Ky., highlights a duty period that demanded the utmost in professional dedication from the unit.

11:00 A.M.: A flight began to Evansville, Ind., to take a 4-year-old leukemia victim to a Memphis hospital.

7:00 P.M.: A helicopter headed for a Mayfield, Ky., hospital to pick up an 8-year-old with third-degree face burns. The child was flown to Bowling Green, Ky., where a Fort Knox helicopter continued the trip to a Louisville hospital.

2:05 A.M.: A helicopter took off for Palmyra, Tenn., to look for a 69-year-old woman who had wandered from a nursing home. The aircraft's searchlight caught her in its beam 35 minutes later.

Despite occasional losses, MAST crews are cheered by the gratitude shown by patients and their families. Here's one letter from a girl in New York State:

"My name is Rebecca Rickard. On July 1, 1975, I climbed Blue Mountain with Explorer Post #26 from Mohawk. Upon reaching the top of the mountain, I developed severe chest pains.

"Someone immediately got in touch with the Air Force Base in Plattsburgh. Two pilots and three paramedics were there a short while later. They immediately put me in the helicopter and took me to Placid Memorial Hospital.

"I do not know the names of these men, but my parents and I feel they did an outstanding job. We thought you should know, too." Rebecca's thoughts reflect those of all the people who have been helped by these extraordinary operations of mercy.

NEW FINDINGS ON EXERCISE AND YOUR HEART

A recently released, 22-year study confirms that physical activity reduces the risk of fatal heart attacks; tips on how to avoid becoming a coronary victim.

By Joan Rattner Heilman

A new landmark study has concluded that consistent, hard, physical exertion over many years definitely reduces the risk of fatal heart attacks. The study, by a group of researchers from the University of California, was headed by Dr. Ralph S. Paffenbarger Jr. and took 22 years to complete. It involved 3,600 longshoremen in the San Francisco area, comparing those who were assigned highly strenuous tasks with others assigned to lighter work or sedentary jobs. The men who used the highest amount of sustained energy on the job were the cargo handlers, who burned up about 1,900 extra calories during an eight-hour day. Longshoremen in less arduous jobs used between 685 and 1,470 extra calories in an average day.

The scientists found that a regular pattern of hard work was accompanied by as much as a 50-percent reduction in risk of fatal heart attacks for the entire group. They added that hard work and control of high blood pressure improved the risk ratio even further.

In an exclusive interview with Dr. Paffenbarger, FAMILY WEEKLY asked him how he would relate his findings to a person not engaged in heavy labor.

"All research has shown," he says, "that vigorous exercise is beneficial for almost everyone. Let me make clear that we don't yet know if it is total energy expenditure that is associated with a reduced risk of heart attack or whether it is the spurts of energy output that provide the protection. And we don't even know the exact mechanism by which exercise is protective.

"We do know that exercise, in order to protect the heart, must be vigorous and consistent, and that few jobs today, even for longshoremen, provide enough exertion. So we must pursue it in our leisure time."

We asked Dr. Paffenbarger to outline his recommendations for the vast majority of us who aren't engaged in heavy work five days a week. He says most experts agree that at least three to four uninterrupted half-hour periods a week of hard physical activity, performed at three-quarters of our maximum heart rate, are necessary.

"Everyone should, of course, be in good shape before starting an exercise program," he points out, "so it's a very good idea to have your doctor check you, especially if you're over 40. And you must start slowly. I think jogging is an excellent exercise for most people." Dr. Paffenbarger, who runs an hour every day himself, suggests going about it this way: start a course of walking, increasing your distance and speed (stop promptly if you have any symptoms of chest pains or other major discomforts) until you get to the point where you can walk 3½ to 4 miles in an hour. Only then should you start in a jog-walk pattern. Building to that walking rate, he says, will probably take a few weeks, and you shouldn't be impatient.

Now walk for five minutes, then jog as long as your tolerance permits (no more than five minutes); walk again, jog again, until eventually you can slowly jog for a half-hour without stopping. "And I mean a slow dog trot, not a fast clip," he stresses. "Stop if it becomes uncomfortable.

"I have to keep warning people not to go slamming out in true American fashion, all by themselves, dressed in running gear, and plan to run a mile. You'll only hurt yourself, if only in a minor way. Just increase your activity as your tolerance permits, then get into a regular pattern and keep it up. That's very important. Cardiovascular fitness is quickly lost after physical activity is reduced. You must be consistent, exerting your body without interruption for at least a half-hour three times a week. If you're sporadic, you may do more harm than good."

Dr. Paffenbarger agrees that jogging isn't the only way to get vigorous exercise, but adds that most sports don't provide the consistent rhythmic exertion needed to get the heart rate high enough. Swimming, he says, is excellent, if you keep moving for a half-hour without stopping. Running in place, dancing, bicycling, rowing and jumping rope also can provide the proper energy output because they not only are rhythmic but also involve the entire body.

Free-lancer Joan Heilman often writes on medical topics and contributes to many publications, including Family Health, Reader's Digest and Good Housekeeping.

WHAT IN THE WORLD...

Workwomen's Compensation

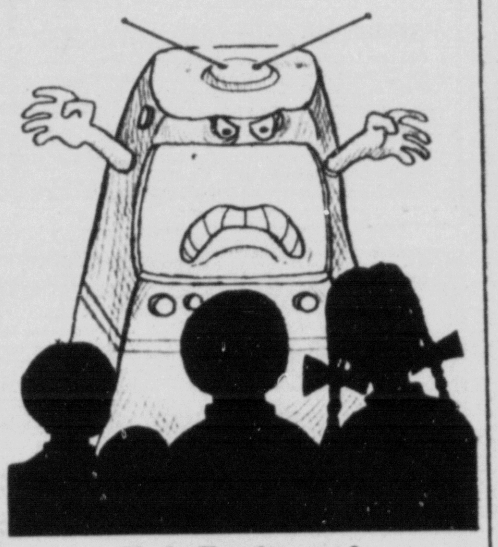
Doing a man's work may turn out to be more than some women tackling formerly all-male jobs may have bargained for. Dr. Jerry L. Pursewell, a Univ. of Okla. professor of industrial engineering, says that women's injuries — and workmen's compensation claims — are soaring because equal-opportunity laws require no specific adaptation of jobs to a woman's strength and physique. Pursewell says most of the injuries are back problems caused by lifting unwieldy loads of material, but many others are caused by tools that are too large or are not balanced properly for women. "We need to take into account the differences between men and women and to adjust the requirements accordingly," concludes Pursewell. One of Pursewell's colleagues at New York Univ., Dr. Erwin R. Tichauer, sees a bright side to the situation: "Job modifications that benefit a woman will also help a man. Because of their greater work tolerance, men have come under unnecessary stress. Changes resulting from the presence of women will benefit all workers."

Stopping Shoplifting

Although not listed on the stock exchange, shoplifting is one of the country's largest industries, netting an estimated $8 million a day in stolen merchandise. And it's not just the merchants' problem, because guess who pays the bill? According to Peter Harbin, senior vice president of a firm manufacturing electronic article-surveillance devices, retailers say that if they could eliminate shoplifting, prices could be cut from 20 to 25%. One effective weapon against shoplifting is electronic article surveillance, which has reduced shoplifting by ½ in the 7,000 stores using it. White plastic inventory-control tags are attached to garments, and if the article is taken from the store, a diode in the tag transmits a signal to the merchant. "One of the things people are most surprised at when we install the system is that people who they think are shoplifters turn out not to be," says Harbin. Who is the average shoplifter? A married white female, 23 years old with one child, and whose husband earns $14,000 a year.

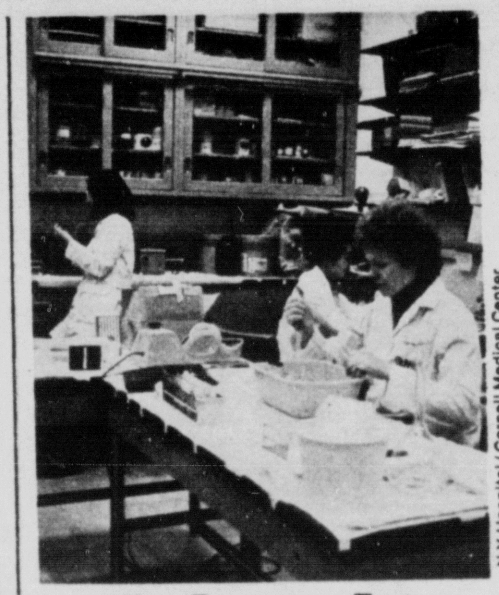
Once A Big Sister...

If your husband complains that you're treating him like a little boy he might be right, especially if you had a younger brother, says Dr. Lucille Forer, a psychologist whose book, The Birth Order Factor, is an integration of several hundred research studies and her own clinical observations. According to Dr. Forer, "One of the biggest influences on a marital relationship is the birth-order of the couple. The spouses tend to carry the type of relation they had with siblings into their marriages. For instance, the oldest child, who tends to dominate his siblings, is likely to keep trying to do it with the spouse." Dr. Forer, who is an eldest child married to another eldest, says that an understanding of how birth order affects personality can help parents understand not only themselves but their children: "It can take a load off the child if the parent expresses his awareness of what the child is going through."



Kids Frightened By TV Violence

A recent national survey reports that 1 of every 4 children between the ages of 7 and 11 is frightened by violence on television. Dr. Nicholas Zill, the psychologist who directed the study for the Foundation for Child Development, where he is a senior staff scientist, says there is a relationship between the amount of television watched and the child's fear of violence in his own life. "Parents should realize that television is not just a mindless baby sitter but that it is a major educational force." Zill advises parents to find out what types of programs their children watch, and "then if you don't like them, have the courage to turn off the set." Watching television with the child so that you can discuss anything frightening that takes place is also helpful.



N.Y. Hospital / Cornell Medical Center

New Pregnancy Test (Is She Or Isn't She?)

Think you might be pregnant? There's a new test available that can give you an answer up to 3 weeks sooner than previously possible. The test, called Biocept-G, detects the presence of a hormone, human Chorionic Gonadotrophin (hCG), which appears in the blood and urine early in pregnancy. Developed by a team headed by Dr. Brij B. Saxena at the N.Y. Hospital-Cornell Medical Center in New York City, the test is 99% accurate as early as 10 days after conception. In addition to allowing the patient to begin planning for her pregnancy earlier, the test can spot certain kinds of abnormal pregnancies. According to Dr. Robert Landesman, who did the initial clinical testing of Biocept-G, "Finding out about the pregnancy earlier can also be a tremendous advantage in helping the woman avoid drugs and radiation that might be harmful."

New Way To Teach Children: Send Parents To School

The children of more than 100 Florida families are achieving better communication and learning skills through a program that trains the best potential teachers they will ever have — their parents. The Univ. of Miami-run program is teaching the parents how to stimulate their infants to explore, experiment, learn and communicate. It is financed with $240,000 from the National Institute of Mental Health, and Dr. Jack Benson and his associates put parents through a 10-week course and supply follow-up booklets to guide them during the child's first four years. The parents are taught how to reward the infant with hugs, talk and attention when the baby experiments with different activities. The goal is to give children learning skills they can use in elementary school.

Quick Takes

A pediatrician's work isn't child's play. The American Academy of Pediatrics says that the average U.S. pediatrician works 58 hours a week and sees 27 patients a day. And when they're on call, pediatricians receive an average of 7 telephone calls a night from anxious parents....If you ride a motorcycle, use your head and wear a helmet. The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration reports that motorcycle deaths have risen 20% in the 9 states that have repealed their motorcycle helmet laws. States that still have their laws on the books didn't report any increases...."Go South young man (or woman)" might be good advice for job hunters. A national survey says that more Southern businessmen expect to increase their work force than employers in any other region. The West was a close second, and job prospects were bleakest in the Northeast....Remember the old expression "a sound mind in a sound body"? Well, a Univ. of Toronto study team reports that children who exercise an extra hour a day not only are healthier but also get higher marks than their sedentary schoolmates.

How To Live Longer

Men can add up to 11 years to their lives and women 7 by following a few sensible health practices. After studying a group of 7,000 Californians for several years, Nedra B. Belloc of the Calif. State Dept. of Public Health's Human Population Laboratory and Dr. Lester Breslow, Dean of UCLA's School of Public Health, say the steps are so basic that your mom probably told you about them. If you'd like a free booklet spelling out the steps, write to Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Greater New York, Box 345-FW, Grand Central Station, New York, N.Y. 10017 and ask for Get the Life That's Coming to You.
